WILL WAR COME?

Rumania's Oil Fields Make Nation's Stand In European Controversy Important.

'PROMISES' IN AIR

Transylvania Ownership May Become Muted Problem, Too.

EDITOR'S NOTE—
Rumania's rich oil fields make that country's alliances a matter of deep concern to all Europe, H. R. Knickerbocker writes in this article of his series "Will War Come."

Neither France nor Germany has any significant supply of oil and with motorized armies the matter of oil looms large in connection with war.

BUCHAREST, March 8.—This is the deep Balkins. The stamp of Turkey is on it. You count your change, watch your luggage. You also watch your political treaties. Every year you go back and make the same treaty over again and again and every few months your foreign minister visits all the other foreign ministers to find out if they still mean what they said.

In the deep Balkans policemen go in threes. The secret service, Siguranza, is almost as good as Russia's G. P. U. The food is good, the beer undrinkable, tablecloths soiled. Rumania is far away from Europe.

But Europe has its eye on Rumania. Because Europe is war-scared, and modern armies are motorized, and motors need oil and Rumania has oil.

A column of flame [illegible] yards high and three [illegible] flares against the morning sky as the Orient express from Vienna to Bucharest speeds past the mid-Rumanian oil fields. The conductor calls the passengers to look. "Been burning for months," he says. "There's another one been burning for years."

HAS "OIL TO BURN"

Rumania has oil literally to burn. So much that they don't bother to put the fire out. Rumania's oil could turn the tide in war time. Neither France nor Germany has any significant supplies of oil. The two chief rivals on the continent are equally dependent on oil from abroad. But France has a fleet and in war time can protect her imports from overseas. Germany has next to no fleet, and reckons on being blockaded in case of war. Germany logically has the greatest interest in securing a safe source of oil.

To get it she will have to play Balkan politics. But Hitler has proven he knows how to play every kind of politics. Today, since the signing of the Polish-German non-aggression pact nobody in Europe will venture to put a limit on what the third Reich may accomplish in breaking up the French system of alliances.

For the Polish pact knocked the first large hole in that system. To understand the background for the question "Will War Come in Europe?" And especially to understand the significance of the Balkans it is necessary to recall how the hostile alliances are lined up.

The French system consists of straight military pacts of mutual defence between France and Poland, France and Czecho-Slovakia, France and Rumania, France and Jugoslavia, France and Belgium. The succession states formed out of the wreckage of the Austro-Hungarian empire, Czechoslovakia, Jugoslavia and Rumania, are in turn united in the little entente. Rumania and Poland, back in 1922 when both were frightened of invasion by Russia, signed a military alliance.

FRENCH SYSTEM

This is the French system. The Italian system has been its principal rival. The basis of that system has been the Italian-Hungarian, Italian - Bulgarian, Italian-Albanian treaties of varying degrees of friendship. Most important was the Italian-Hungarian treaty of 1926, as a treaty of friendship but believed to be really a military treaty.

One of its clauses was believed to provide that in case of an Italian-Jugoslav war, while Italian troops drove for Zagreb, Hungary would put two army corps into the socalled Mur island, the triangle between the Mur and the Drau rivers in the northeast corner of Jugoslavia next to the Hungarian border, which would be the most effective way to divide the Jugoslav forces.

In the Balkans, it may be further recalled, they are realists. Italy in return was believed to have promised to support Hungary's claims for revision against Czechoslovakia but also against Rumania. It happened however that Italy was also trying to make friends with Rumania, since she could be very useful to Italy in case of a Jugoslav-Italian war. Early in 1933 it was reported that Italy in pursuit of

C. OF C. ASKS COUNCIL FOR TRAFFIC SURVEY

Organization in Signed Letter Urges Economy in Traffic Light Operation; Says It Believes Investigation Would Show Some Present Lights as Not Needed.

Council today had on file a request from the Chamber of Commerce that a careful traffic survey be made before any additional traffic lights are erected at the street's various intersections.

The request was made in the form of a communication signed by Mack Parrett, Jr., secretary, and endorsed by the directors of the organization. Upon motion of Councilman Frank Marion the request was received and filed.

At its last session council discussed traffic light possibilities at several locations and placed the matter in the hands of the safety committee, Marion, Helwagen, and Leist, and the safety director, Leroy T. Shaner, with power to act. Mr. Marion in a statement after the communication was read said he wished the Chamber of Commerce would have discussed the matter with the committee in whose hands it had been placed.

WOULD TEST VOLUME

The letter urged that traffic in all directions be surveyed over a considerable period of time at the intersections in question to establish the definite need for traffic lights. "Cities make such a survey when a request is made for traffic lights and definite standards of volume of traffic in all directions must exceed certain volume before lights are installed," the communication read.

"We suggest that data be secured on such requirements," the letter continued, "and that surveys be made on all proposed and also all existing traffic lighted corners. It is the opinion of this body that if such a survey be made, it will be found that there is not sufficient traffic to justify some of the existing traffic lights, and by their elimination, the money now spent for their operation can be well used to help pay the added policemen." An earlier paragraph in the letter lauded the additional police protection.

COMPARE CHILLICOTHE

The letter went on to say: "Added traffic experience is enabling the car driver to drive safely without the assistance of mechanical traffic signals. Traffic lights were once required where none are now needed. Chillicothe with vastly more traffic than we have is able to handle that greater traffic with less traffic accidents with only three traffic lights.

"It is our hope that instead of increasing the tax burden with additional lights, it will be found possible to cut the city operating expense by eliminating some of the existing lights and at the same time decrease the traffic accidents now caused because someone claims "I had the light."

"It is not significant that Circleville with six traffic lights has more traffic accidents than Chillicothe where there are only half as many?

"Every traffic light that can be eliminated saves the city about $72 per year."

Councilman William Reid took exceptions to the statement in the letter which said money used for traffic lights could be used to help pay additional policemen.

McCaw Addresses Rotary; Speaks at Two Legion Meetings This Evening.

Reciting the program and ideals of the American Legion, Thomas McCaw, of Dennison, commander of the Ohio department of the legion, addressed the Rotary club in the New American Hotel Coffee Shoppe at noon today.

He is scheduled to attend a banquet for members of Howard Hall post and the auxiliary at 6 p. m. Thursday in Memorial Hall and to address a meeting of ex-service men also in Memorial Hall at 8 o'clock.

Mr. McCaw named the Legion's ideals as (1) rehabilitation of comrades and dependents; (2) education of youth; (3) full service to community, state, and nation.

He also explained the four point national program which he plans to go into in further detail at the meetings tonight.

"The American Legion," he said "is always interested in the education of the youth of the nation. We believe economy is necessary in many instances but we do not believe the schools should be handicapped by drastic reductions. Every community should provide adequate educational facilities for all nations."

Commander McCaw discussed the Junior baseball leagues and Boy Scout troops sponsored by the Legion, and stressed school awards to worthy boy and girl students.

"I believe parents and citizens should be more interested in the schools and assist the teachers and boards of education in solving their problems," he declared.

He closed his interesting talk by saying: "The American Legion is always ready to serve."

Swedish Prince, Commoner, Wed

LONDON, March 8. — Renouncing royal prerogatives, Prince Sigvard, second son of Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf of Sweden, was married in a simple civil ceremony today to Miss Erika Patzek, pettite, blonde actress, daughter of a Berlin merchant.

Over-riding strenuous efforts of the Swedish royal family to prevent the match, Prince Sigvard walked into the Caxton hall registry office shortly before noon, his bride-to-be on his arm.

He emerged a few minutes later—a very few minutes later—as plain "Mr. Bernadotte."

After their honeymoon the couple plan to return to the Berlin motion picture studio where they met, Sigvard as assistant director and his bride as an actress in minor roles.

MRS. BROWN TAKEN IN ASHVILLE HOME

Mrs. Lulu Bard Brown, aged 68, widow of James Brown, died at her home in Ashville, Wednesday at 7 p. m. of heart trouble.

She is survived by one daughter, Miss Sophronia, at home.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 2 p. m. at the residence with Rev. H. H. Glick officiating. E. F. Schlegel will be in charge of burial in South Bloomfield cemetery.

NO EXTENSION SEEN ON PERSONAL TAXES

Auditor Clifford White has received a notice from the Ohio Tax commission that no extension past the March 31 deadline can be allowed for filing personal tax returns.

A statute giving the tax commission this power has expired.

'Penny Ante' Gang Sought In 4 Holdups

Franklin-Co Sheriff Says Same Men Robbed Galena, Delaware, Carey Banks.

COLUMBUS, March 8.—The band of bandits who invaded banks at Westerville and Galena yesterday, is believed to be the same gang responsible for other holdups recently at Delaware and at Carey, O., Sheriff Ross Anderson of Franklin-co, revealed today.

Sheriff Anderson said the band, known to officials here as "the penny ante gang," is comprised of three or four men and one woman.

He declared that their manner of staging the holdups yesterday was similar to that of the bandits who held up the Delaware County National Bank last January 17 and obtained $10, and later held up a bank at Carey, O., and obtained $75.

The bandits who invaded the Westerville and Galena banks yesterday got only $284 for their trouble. Failing to obtain any loot at all in the Westerville attempt, the gang succeeded in lifting $284 from the Bank of Galena.

Sheriff Anderson said the gang is called the "Penny Ante gang," because "all they ever got is the counter change in the banks."

NINE EXECUTED

MEXICO CITY, March 8.—Nine members of the Agrarian, or Peasants' party, were executed by a firing squad at Tlalixcoyan, state of Vera Cruz, today.

An army colonel, whose name was withheld, ordered the execution, according to meagre reports received here.

SENATOR LLOYD'S AUTO IS DAMAGED

State Senator John A. Lloyd, of Portsmouth, enroute to Columbus to attend a session of the Ohio legislature, was uninjured Thursday morning when his Ford automobile skidded in N. Court-st and tore some small trees from the ground in front of the Harvard Crist residence.

Senator Lloyd's son, who accompanied him, also was unhurt.

The slush-covered highway was blamed for the accident.

The right rear wheel was broken off the Ford which was taken to the Reliable Motors Co. for repairs.

PALM IMPROVING

Cris Palm, who has been returned to his home on E. High-st from White Cross hospital, Columbus, where he underwent an operation, is reported improving.

WELL GUARDED DURING TRIAL

Harry Pierpont, one of three accomplices of John Dillinger, notorious killer, is photographed in Lima, O., courtroom, as his trial got under way. Pierpont is charged with the slaying of Sheriff Jess Sarber of Allen-co, Ohio, when he set John Dillinger free from jail. In the background is Sheriff Dode Sarber, son of the slain sheriff, with machine gun in hand.

"No Trespassing on Government Corner," Postmaster States

Circleville residents were warned, Thursday, by Postmaster Hulse Hays that the Hohen-Schleyer property at Court and Mound-sts is now owned by the government and no trespassing is allowed.

A number of persons have gone on the grounds, Mr. Hays said, and several shrubs and plants have been taken. This is strictly unlawful and will not be tolerated. "I do not want to be arbitrary," the postmaster said, "but I have orders to keep everyone off the grounds."

MRS. HOLLEY FACES FIGHT

Request For Ouster Being Prepared by Prosecutor; Cites Neglect of Duty.

CROWN POINT, Ind., March 8.—Mrs. Lillian Holley, Indiana's only woman sheriff, today faced possible ouster proceedings as the investigation into the escape of John Dillinger, super-desperado, from the county jail gained momentum.

Four more state investigators were sent here from Indianapolis by Philip Lutz, Jr., attorney general, who announced;

"Every hour we get more information that leads us to believe that the delivery did not just happen, but was planned. Dillinger had help."

Two of Sheriff Holley's helpers, Deputy Sheriff Ernest Blunk and Turnkey Sam Cahoon are under arrest.

TO FILE REQUESTS

Prosecutor Robert Estill and Edward Barce, assistant attorney general, were reported to be drafting an information to be filed before Circuit Judge Joseph Sullivan of Lake-co seeking the sheriff's removal for neglect of duty in connection with Dillinger's flight.

But despite the pressure being brought to bear on the slight, blonde lady sheriff she refused to relinquish her office.

The widespread search for Dillinger thus far has failed to bring forth any information concerning his whereabouts. Dillinger was scheduled to go to trial next Monday for the murder of an East Chicago, Ind., policeman during a bank robbery.

Federal agents under Melvin Purvis, Chicago division chieftain,

CONVICTED DOCTOR IS IN SEMI-STUPOR

CHICAGO, March 8.—Her brain seemingly numbed by the jury's verdict finding her guilty of the operating table murder of Rheta Gardner Wynekoop, Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop lay in a semi-stupor today in the county jail.

The 63-year-old physician was given a 25 year penitentiary sentence as punishment for the weird murder of her daughter-in-law, Rheta.

Jail physicians kept a close watch over the aged woman doctor whose heart ailment brought a sudden halt to the first trial.

"I feel ill—my heart," she told members of her family who visited her at the jail. "I can't talk. I want to be left alone to think."

LIMA TENSE AS PIERPONT TRIAL OPENS

Possibility of Dillinger Striking Keeps Allen-co City Electrified

KILLER IS NERVOUS

Jury Complete; 'Trigger Man' Talks with Mother

LIMA, March 8.—When Harry Pierpont, reputed Dillinger gang gunman, was arrested in Tucson, Ariz., for the slaying of Sheriff Jess L. Sarber, a snub-nosed revolver owned by the slain officer was found in the outlaws pocket, Ernest M. Botkin, Allen county prosecutor, declared today in his opening statement at Pierpont's first degree murder trial here.

Addressing the jury of ten men and two women, finally chosen to comprise the jury in a night session of the court last night, Prosecutor Botkin gave vivid and dramatic recital of the gang invasion of the Allen-co jail last October 12 when Sheriff Sarber was shot down in cold blood and gang leader John Dillinger was liberated.

Botkin charged that Pierpont planned the jail delivery of Dillinger as a gesture of gratitude for Dillinger's assistance in working the Michigan City, Ind., prison break last September 26.

LIMA, March 8.—Tenseness, wrought of fears over the whereabouts of John Dillinger, tightened about the city of Lima today as testimony was scheduled to start in the first degree murder trial of the gangleader's chief lieutenant, Harry Pierpont.

The way was paved for the actual start of the trial last night when a jury of ten men and two women was completed and sworn in after two days of verbal haggling between opposing attorneys.

Continued lack of definite news as to the exact whereabouts of Dillinger, who broke out of the Crown Point, Ind., jail last Saturday, kept the city worried that the desperado may be awaiting an opportune time to stage a surprise invasion and attempt to liberate Pierpont, who is accused of the murder of Sheriff Jess L. Sarber, slain last October when Dillinger himself was freed from the Allen-co jail.

GUARDS FILL CITY

The numerous reports that Dillinger has been sighted here or there in scattered sections of the middle-west served only to intensify the "jitteriness" of the city, despite the fact that the county jail and the county courthouse for blocks around are encircled with a closelywoven web of armed guards, recruited from the Ohio National Guard and local and county officers.

A rumor ran through the city like wild-fire late yesterday that Dillinger had been reported seen in the vicinity of Mt. Vernon, O., four counties away. It turned out, however, that the reports concerned a chase being given in that

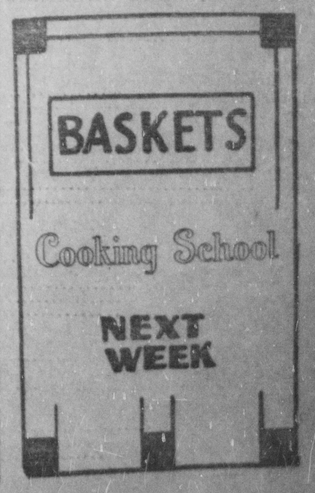
YEGGS GET $50,000 IN DAYLIGHT THEFT

GREENVILLE, S. C., March 8.—In a bold daylight holdup in the heart of the downtown district, two unmasked white bandits today robbed a South Carolina national bank messenger of a mail pouch containing $50,000 in currency.

The bandits, brandishing revolvers, forced the bank messengers' car to the curb as he drove to the bank from the postoffice, snatched the bag of money and sped out of town toward Atlanta.

The bandit car, a small wine-colored coach, bore North Carolina license tags.



Length of Power Firm's Franchise is Questioned

Solicitor Carl C. Leist has been instructed by council to write to Attorney General John W. Bricker seeking an opinion concerning the length of the franchise owned by the Southern Ohio Electric Co., for operation in Circleville.

The matter was broached in the council meeting, Wednesday evening, by Ben H. Gordon who asked that an attorney general's opinion be sought.

The outcome of the question would have much bearing on whether or not the city ever plans municipal ownership of its power plant. Some local persons who have been discussing the municipal ownership question believe it would be impossible to successfully operate such a plant if the private utility would remain in the field. Electric company officials declare they have a perpetual franchise in Circleville.

OTHER COUNCIL BUSINESS

Placed the matter of water from the Eshelman Milling Co. running in open gutters on Clinton, Mill, and Union-sts in the hands of the service committee. The question was presented by Councilman Ben Gordon.

Received the report of Mayor W. B. Cady that fines during February totalled $56.70 and fees $26.10, making a total of $82.80.

Heard receipts of Berger hospital for February which amounted to $515.

Listened to Clerk Fred Nicholas read the water ordinance for the second time after the ordinance committee reported it out for second reading without recommendation. Also instructed the clerk to notify Fosdick and Hilmer, Cincinnati engineers, to appear at the March 21 meeting to discuss the water ordinance. The engineers still owe the city two meetings under their $2,300 contract.

Discussed plans for the new city jail for which funds will be sought under the Public Works administration. W. E. Austin, architect, appeared with his drawings. This discussion, in committee session, lasted over an hour.

Appropriated $150 to pay for the right-of-way through the Voll land in the northend for construction of the storm water sewer now under construction, and $1 to pay the Norfolk and Western for touching its land.

AGED WOMAN DIES IN COUNTY HOME

Rites will be held Friday at 10 a. m. at the Whisler Presbyterian church for Mrs. Anna Parkerson, 88, who died late Tuesday at the county infirmary.

One daughter, Mrs. Mary Hoffman, survives.

Interment will be in Whisler cemetery by H. E. Defenbaugh and Sons.

RUNAWAY LOGAN-CO BOYS CAUGHT HERE

Bellefontaine authorities were to come here, Thursday, to return two runaways to Logan-co. The boys, Albert Parker and Phillip Troyer, aged 15 and 13, were found at the Crites Oil Co. station, S. Court-st, Wednesday night, by Officer Karl Radcliff.

They admitted they were runaways and were turned over to Juvenile Officer Frank Goff Thursday morning. He called Bellefontaine to notify local juvenile authorities.

SALES TAXES FACE DEFEAT

Rural Legislators Line Up Solidly Against Plan; Substitute Is Written.

COLUMBUS, March 8.—Gov. George White's 3 per cents sales tax fund itself in the midst of a hurricane of opposition today as legislators from rural districts lined up solidly to oppose it.

Sponsored by Rep. Robert F. Kaser (D) Sidney, and Rep. Jerome N. Curtis (D) Cleveland, an independent permanent tax program was offered in the House of Representatives as a substitute for the administration's set-up based on the sales tax.

As outlined by Kaser, the independent substitute program contains five major planks, viz.;

1. An income tax as the foundation.

2. An increase in the utilities excise tax greater than the 1 per cent boost recommended by the administration.

3. A state tax on all chain stores.

4. An increase from two to three mills of the intangible tax rate on deposits in financial institutions.

5. A tax of 50 cents for each $100 of all mortgages filed, the revenue to go to counties, municipalities and townships.

MAYOR CADY WARNS OF DANGEROUS ACTS

Issues Warning to School Children Who Throw Ice Balls, and Darts

Several practices which have gained headway among school children were ordered stopped today by Mayor W. B. Cady.

One is throwing of ice balls on the streets. Several injuries have been reported and much danger accompanies such "sport."

Another is shooting of pin darts by use of rubber bands; another "sport" which is very dangerous.

Third is overloading automobiles traveling to and from school. One automobile driven to school by a local youth carried 12 fellow-students from school one noon this week. There is an ordinance against such action.

Mayor Cady warned that violators of these orders will be subject to arrest.

SCIOTO CANAL CASE IS OPEN

Delegations to Gather in Columbus to Discuss Route's Advisability.

A delegation of Circleville civic leaders are planning to go to Columbus, Friday, to attend a hearing on the contemplated Scioto-Sandusky route for the Ohio to Lake Erie barge canal.

Major W. D. Styer, chief of the corps of army engineers of the Pittsburgh district, studying the project, will be in charge of the meeting. He was conducting a similar meeting in Dayton today on the advisability of the route going through the Great Miami and Maumee rivers. The Cincinnati-Toledo route is one of those considered.

Proponents of the Beaver-Mahoning or Pittsburgh-Ashtabula route will be given hearings at Youngstown March 13.

Plans for the proposed Scioto-Sandusky program are being held up pending a report from the army engineers now making a survey of the district, it was learned. Alan N. Jordon, executive secretary of an organization recently set up to work toward the establishment of a conservancy district, said the project is being delayed also until the Muskingum valley conservancy program is at the construction stage.

Mr. Jordon is scheduled to speak here next Tuesday before the Chamber of Commerce on the flood control plans.

The personnel of the delegation which will attend the Columbus meeting is not yet certain.

KENAGY AND MOYER ARE TRANSFERRED

A. W. Kenagy, N. Court-st, who has been local agent of the Railway Express Co., has been transferred to Xenia, and Richard Moyer, who has been truck driver for the local office, has been sent to the Gallipolis agency. Mr. Moyer has been promoted to agent.

Thomas Burk, formerly of Gallipolis, has been named to the local office.

FLYER UNHURT

MARION, March 8—Carburetor trouble was blamed today for the forced landing near here late yesterday of an army airplane piloted by John L. McAlister, assigned to the Cleveland army airmail headquarters from Langley Field, Va.

ROOSEVELT OPENS WAY FOR RETURN OF PRIVATE AIRMAIL

WASHINGTON, March 8.—President Roosevelt informally asked Congress today to legislate the quick return of the airmail to commercial aviation.

Enactment of the president's program, as interpreted in official circles, would make many of the old operating companies eligible to bid on new contracts—when, and only when, they have divested themselves of all connection with officials who had a part in the securing of the now-cancelled contracts which the government considered contrary to "good faith and public policy."

Formal requests for a new deal in airmail went forward in identical letters dispatched by the president to Senate and House postal committees. Mr. Roosevelt asked for a law which would avoid the evils of the past and promote development of aviation. He outlined virtually every objective in the letters. The law he asked would provide:

"COMPETITIVE BIDS"

1. That new airmail contracts be let to commercial companies for three year periods, after "full, open and fair" competitive bidding.

2. That no contract should be made with any company, new or old, "any of whose officers were party to the obtaining of former section of the state to two "small-time" bank bandits who held up a bank at Galena and obtained $250.

Such reports, undeniably the product of inflamed imagination and exaggerated in passing from mouth-to-mouth, gave proof of the "jumpiness" of the city over the trial of Pierpont.

Although the accused killer has fallen into a surly and condemning frame of mind, it was apparent that he is hopeful and alert to the possibility that he yet may be rescued from the ordeal of finishing the trial, upon the out come of which his life is staked.

Prosecuting Attorney Ernest Botkin made it plainly evident in questioning the prospective jurors during the last two days that he intends to ask the death penalty for the reputed Dillinger "triggerman."

JURY DIVIDED

The jury which will weigh the fate of Pierpont is composed of three farmers, two merchants, two tool-makers, a realestate dealer, a church janitor and two housewives.

Members of the regular jury are:

C. T. Clantz of Spencerville, a farmer.

George T. Kempf of Lima, a tool and die worker.

Martin O'Brien of Lima, a retired merchant.

C. D. Hilty of Bluffton, a tool and die worker.

H. R. Hefner of Lafayette, a farmer.

Ross McCallum of Lima, a real estate dealer.

Kathryn Clutter of Lima, a housewife.

Carl Landwehr of Delphos, a bee-keeper.

Mary E. Dale of Lima, a housewife.

Amos Evans of Cairo, a merchant.

William Kidd of Bluffton, a farmer.

Charles Lehman of Delphos, a church janitor.

A 13th, alternative juror also was selected. She was Miss Florence Rice of Delphos, a state relief commission stenographer.

Pierpont was restless throughout the selection of the jury. He frequently crossed and uncrossed his legs, causing the 15 pounds of chain with which he was manacled, to clank harshly through the stillness of the courtroom. When he was taken back to the jail for the night, the accused killer kissed his mother goodnight.

TALKED WITH MOTHER

During a recess of the court yesterday. Pierpont was allowed to talk with his mother for the first time. Although he had seen her in court every day since the hearing started, he had not been allowed to speak to her.

Mrs. Pierpont smothered her son in her arms and kissed him repeatedly.

During the selection of the jury last night, Sheriff Don Sarber, 24-year-old "college-boy" son of the slain officer who succeeded his father as sheriff of Allen-co, disclosed to newspapermen that Pierpont had attempted to bribe a deputy sheriff with $2,000 for a gun.

The young sheriff said that Pierpont made the offer for the gun to a special deputy in a jocular manner.

"But I do not doubt that he would have tried to arrange a deal if the deputy had been interested," said the sheriff.

Saber denied, however, that he had apprehended a deputy in the act of smuggling a gun into a cell. Because the deputy had been assigned to a different post, the reports had been circulated. He said he would rotate all deputies at intervals.

"I don't want any of my deputies to get too friendly with these gangsters," he declared.

Rehabilitation of the Labor Department Under Frances Perkins

WASHINGTON — No branch of the government needed a New Deal more desperately than the Department of Labor a year ago. Nine years of 'Puddler Jim' Davis, plus three years of Bill Doak, had reduced it to the gutter-level. Labor feared and distrusted it. Many employers viewed it with contempt and disgust. The public at large scarcely knew it existed, or cared.

The year that Frances Perkins has ruled over the Labor Department has witnessed a rehabilitation of its repute, integrity, and efficiency.

Today its statistics are accepted in the most critical quarters without question. The Red-hunting antics of the Doak regime are a thing of the past. Order, decency, intelligence, liberalism dominate its affairs. And yet—

The year has been no commensurate enhancement in Miss Perkins' popularity.

Her achievements are acknowledged and admired. Her unquestionable ability is conceded. That she is a potent and liberal force in the New Deal is admitted. Yet, while she has 'sold" her achievements and capabilities, she has not 'sold" herself.

It is significant that of all the New Deal agencies, the United States Employment Service - under her jurisdiction - was the only one slashed on Capitol Hill.

There is a reason—and it has given her trouble with both Congress and the press.

Bossy

There was no New Dealer, not even excepting the President, whom the press and Congress were more ready to welcome than Miss Perkins. They had laughed at Davis, despised Doak. They looked forward to a competent executive at the head of the long-suffering Labor Department.

But Madame Secretary had been in office only a few weeks before the press and Capitol Hill discovered that she classed them both in the category of bothersome nuisances. Miss Perkins was aloof, brusque and bossy. When Tacoma's crusading Senator Homer T. Bone sought to protest her appointment of a reactionary anti-laborite as unemployment supervisor of Washington, she curtly refused to see him. When Pat Harrison, chairman of the powerful Senate Finance Committee, called at her office, she let him cool his heels for half an hour, and then rushed off without seeing him. Before Congressional committees she speaks with commanding brilliance, but a distinctly tutorial manner.

This is deeply resented.

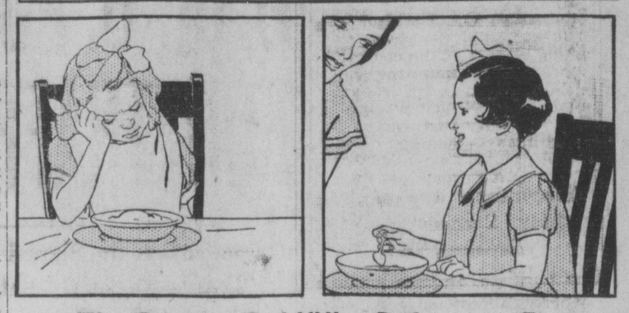
Despite her old-maidish disposition, Miss Perkins enjoys a happy married life. Her husband is Paul Wilson, a New York statistician. She has one daughter and one pet hobby - collecting patchwork quilts. At Mt. Holyoke where she went to college, Miss Perkins was nicknamed the 'Loquacious Linguist" and once played the part of Brutus in 'The Lamentable Tragedy of Julius Caesar."

Miss Perkins has one quality perhaps to a greater degree than any of her Cabinet colleagues—courage. She is one of the few who will stand up and tell the President exactly what she thinks, no matter how strenuously he may disagree.

Although not reputed to be a good organizer, Miss Perkins has made several good appointments. One was Edward F. McGrady, first assistant secretary, another Dr. Isador Lubin, Commissioner of Labor Statistics. McGrady is one of the ablest, most liberal and widely esteemed Labor leaders, but just because he was pushed by Jim Farley, Miss Perkins spurned him at first as if he were poison. Finally she saw how he operated as aide to General Johnson and welcomed him into her official family.

New York follows New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland in the list of states that have lost their peach crops. Why isn't the parsnip corp ever ruined?

Whose Fault?



The Boy or Girl Who Refuses to Eat

"What have I ever done to deserve a child who refuses to eat, and is just skin and bones?" The mother who asks that question might be surprised to learn that she alone is to blame. She knows a lack of appetite is the sign of a clogged system, but does the wrong thing to remedy the condition. A violent cathartic that upsets the stomach pulls down a child like a spell of sickness. It often forms the laxative habit. A more sensible way of regulating children is explained in the column to the right:

It's a lucky girl whose mother knows how to regulate her children's bowels without some strong, evil-tasting cathartic that upsets the system and ruins their appetite! Whenever sluggishness coats the little tongue, makes the whites of the eyes a bilious yellow, or a child is headachy and fretful, just try pure California Syrup of Figs. The senna in this fruity laxative is so agreeable to take, so natural in action! Get real California Syrup of Figs at any drug store. The bottle should say 'California'.

Our Loan No. 28-778—

is a young man who has held a contract for several years to supply a meat market with meat. His father had always financed him, but last year when it came time to buy up his young stock, his father could not help. So he borrowed $500.00 from The City Loan to do his buying and thus saved his contract. His business yields him a steady income and enables him to pay off a substantial part of his loan every month. Best of all he will no longer have to depend on dad for the money he needs.

USE BOOR'S LIGHT

Safety Director Shaner said T. A. Boor, of Ashville, who has patented a traffic light, has asked permission to install his light on a trial basis at Court and High-sts which permission was granted. The light has not yet been erected.

Can Get Drunk Twice

NEWTON, Mass.—It's all right to get intoxicated in Newton, but not more than twice a year. The Newton liquor license commission ordered that liquor could not be sold to anyone who got drunk more than twice a year.

NRA PLANS HOUR SLASH, PAY BOOST

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The government was definitely set today upon the road to a 10 per cent reduction in hours and a 10 per cent increase in pay for the workers.

Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson made it plain at the closing session of the code authorities assembled here, the government was firm in its resolve to obtain a "ten and ten" pact with every industry that cannot prove a legitimate exemption, and that he will remain as administrator of the NRA so long as President Roosevelt desires him.

He admitted some industries cannot assume the extra burden of the plan but held it was "proper to encourage increased wages and reduced hours per week," despite the almost universal protest that has been heard during the past three-day meeting of the code authorities.

SOME UNABLE

"There are some industries that could not do what I tentatively suggested about wages and hours," Johnson said. "There are some where business is so little that, if they did adopt the rule, it would not make any difference to employment. But there are many that obviously can meet the suggestion to work on a 10 per cent decrease in hours per week and a 10 per cent increase in hourly wages. The President expressly said he favored resiliency in any such rule.

"We all know some industries cannot do this. We know that in some it would be ineffective. But we know that in many there is no excuse for not doing it."

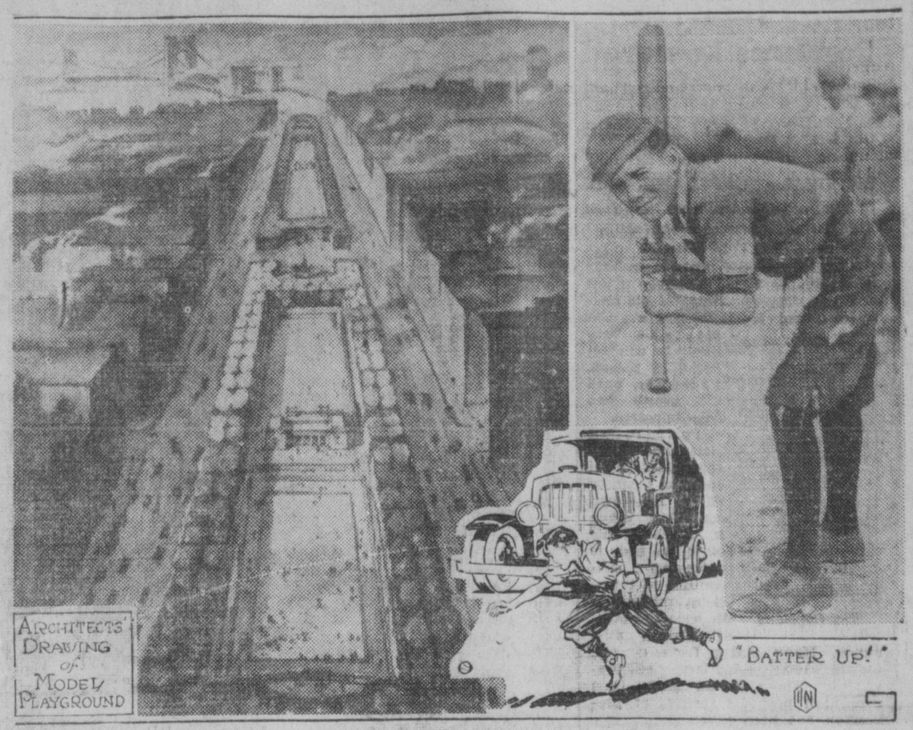
He attacked "company unions" as a "Frankenstein" and took particular pains to praise the various officials of the American Federation of Labor who are serving in various capacities under the NRA Blue Eagle.

"We have got to accord labor the rights guaranteed by this act," he said. "There is no law prohibiting a company union as such if there is no interposition whatever by employers, and if the men freely choose it. But 99 times out of 100, you and I know that this is not the case. Let us not kid ourselves. Let us act before Congress acts. Let us obey the law. Call in Senator Wagner's board. (The National Labor board.) Let your men express their choice under those public auspices from which no question can arise.

"I would rather deal with William Green, John Lewis, Edward McGrady, Michael McDonough, George Berry and a host of others than with any Frankenstein that you may build up under the guise of a company union."

Johnson has asked the members of the capital goods industries code authorities to meet under the chairmanship of George H. Houston, president of the Baldwin Locomotive company, and the code authorities and committees of consumers' goods industries under the chairmanship of George Sloan, president of the textile institute, and consider his "ten and ten" policy.

New Playground Eden for Gotham Children



With the start of construction on the seven-block playground in New York's lower East Side by CWA workers, the death rate among East Side children is due for a big drop. Street baseball and East River bathing has taken an appalling toll of young lives every summer in that congested area. The new playground, the site of which originally was intended for a model housing scheme, will provide facilities for every type of juvenile sport. The plans call for baseball diamonds, wading pools with spray showers, tennis courts and the hundred and one other modes of diversion beloved of the young and healthy. It will also provide a resting place for mothers in the day and floodlighted at night, a recreation spot for adults

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

THIS one was told me by a movie feller they call a cutter. That is a fellow that if the picture hasn't been taken bad enough in the first place, why he cuts it all up and puts it back together so it makes it look like something. Well, here I meet him in Berlin the other day and he is a real producer and buyer and seller of Movies, and is a real live hustling Kid. If you haven't gone into the movie business yet, why you can't do worse than Walter. He will sell you anything that was ever taken. Well, we sit having a party one night, arguing over the movies, and just as I was going to sleep he broke out with the following. He went back home to where he had lived in Pennsylvania. He asked about a certain Jones family that used to live there and they told him here is what happened to them. "Tom, he is out where you come from in Hollywood. He is in the Movies. He is a Movie Sheik and doing fine, they say. Jack, that's the next one; he turned stage Actor and you see his picture ever once in awhile. William is an Artist; he is a pretty good Painter, they say. Mary, the Sister, is doing some Literary work, but Sam, he never amounted to anything at all. He stayed here and it just took about all he ever made to support the rest of them."

PICKAWAY PUPILS STUDY FOR TESTS

Pickaway-co school pupils are training for several state tests scheduled within the next month.

The county senior scholarship test, also open to the local high school, will be conducted here March 24 beginning at 8 a. m. An agricultural test will be held the same day. The tests are sponsored by the state department of education with D. L. Buchanan, local supervisor. His committee includes Profs. E. L. Daly, E. I. Gephart, Ray Sponsler, Harold Bowers, and C. A. Higley.

On March 31 the county-wide elimination for the state test will be held. Thirty students will be selected to represent Pickaway-co. Fifteen subjects will be presented. Examinations will be held at Williamsport and Ashville schools. The townships have not yet been assigned their school.

McAlister Trial Set

COLUMBUS, March 8.—After listening to testimony for a day and a half, a grand jury today had returned a second degree murder indictment against Daniel McAlister, suspended city detective, in connection with the fatal shooting of Harry Adams, 22-year-old South high school graduate, last February 11.

Trial of the detective is expected to be set for the week of March 19, according to Donald J. Hoskins, Franklin-co prosecutor.

Only a Spark Needed

HOW ripe for war is the situation along the Manchukuo-Soviet border is seen in the sharp protest sent Moscow by Tokyo against Russian airplane flights over Manchukuo and Korea. Additional evidence of danger is supplied in reports from border points relating that a Japanese military plane has been shot down and that the pilot of Japanese civilian plane plane has been wounded by Russians.

The Tokyo protest may be expected to evoke a set of fresh charges from Soviet sources concerning the violation of Russian territory by Japanese airmen.

There may be much or little truth in these reports. The important thing is that they are being made and that on either side of the border is an army potentially hostile to the other, and some of the leaders of both of which no doubt are eager for a fight.

This situation was not created suddenly. It has been in process of development for several years, marked by frequent predictions of war between the two countries. Each side finally has massed large bodies of troops along the border. These armies are equipped with the most modern weapons of war on land, water and in the air. They are made up of well trained soldiers. In the Japanese army are many veterans of the Japanese campaign in China.

It would be hard to stage a more perfect setting for the outbreak of war. Weather conditions constitute about the only unfavorable element, but these are no guarantee against a clash at this time. All that is needed is a spark. A border incident that at any other time would be insignificant can supply this.

Border incidents are occurring, actually and by report. Cool heads—if there are any—in Tokyo and Moscow many prevent a clash. But there are no strong grounds on which to base such a hope.

This situation, from the standpoint of peace, is extremely dangerous.

Single Homes

ENORMOUS home hotels will one day supplant the traditional one-family house in America, predicts a modernist architect who looks upon the ideal of life in a one-family house as nothing more than the old-fashioned conception of civilization.

The trend has, to be sure, been in that direction in the cities, where something less than the ideal is accepted for its greater convenience or for financial reasons. But even there the suburbs with their one-family houses swallow up the cliff-dwellers once it is theirs to choose. And in the small town, where the double-house, rows of houses and flat are the nearest things to the city apartment, the demand is for single houses set on wider and deeper lots.

This does not mean that tomorrow's trend will not turn to the "home hotel." When the large apartment can offer more privacy through actually sound-proof walls, air-conditioning permitting closed windows and doors the year around and home ownership within the reach of small incomes, then will come true.

But for today each one-family dwelling represents in greater or less degree one of man's most natural instincts—that of owning his home. And as yet the apartment does not satisfy that instinct.

"KNAVE'S GIRL"

By JOAN CLAYTON

COPYRIGHT 1932, KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Fear that Bill McGee, the racketeer, would wreak vengeance on her and her family if she refused to go out with him, caused lovely Patricia Warren to accept his invitations. Bill is shot by a rival gangster while in Pat's company. Pat rushes home in terror and her stepmother puts her out, saying the police are looking for Pat. Unable to find employment, Pat resorts to her card skill and plays professional bridge. Julian Haverholt, noted bridge expert, makes her his partner. While they are discussing business details at his home, Clark Tracy, the polo player and Pat's secret love, calls. She had met him once but he does not recognize her. Haverholt introduces Pat as his niece. She is indignant, but he explains later that he was thinking of her reputation and that it would be advisable for her to assume that role as long as she is to stay at his home. Accustomed to poverty, Pat revels in the luxury of her surroundings. Reading an announcement of Clark's approaching marriage to Marthe March, Pat experiences pangs of jealousy. Following the settling of a bridge argument, Haverholt wants to give Pat a gift to celebrate their coming to an agreement. She selects a roadster like Marthe March's. Noting Pat's disappointment when Clark goes away with his fiancee's family and breaks an appointment to teach her how to drive, Haverholt asks her if she is in love with Clark. She denies it. Days go by with nothing but bridge and Pat is exhausted. The great test comes when Pat and Haverholt enter a tournament sponsored by Reuben Blair, Haverholt's bitter rival.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

They reached the hotel. The club rooms were on the fourteenth floor. Somehow, Patricia had expected unusual excitement in the lobby. There was none. The Hotel Winston, a smart Park Avenue hotel, accepted the fact of a major bridge tournament with surprising equanimity. One or two of the clerks recognized Haverholt and whispered about him and his young companion; that was all.

"There isn't much bally-hoo, is there?" said Patricia, when they were waiting for the elevator.

"Reuben Blair's way of doing things," commented Haverholt disgustedly. "He thinks the press is vulgar. I'd have this hotel simply boiling with reporters, I'd have crowds in the street, I'd have——"

"A brass band in the lobby?" suggested Patricia.

"Not quite that," conceded Haverholt, unsmilingly. "But, the day is coming and Blair will have to see it, when contract bridge will belong not to the few but to the public."

"And you will be king of it all?"

"I am king," admitted Haverholt simply.

They stepped into the elevator and swooped upward.

"By the way," said the bridge expert casually, "Clark is back from Aiken. He may be on hand tonight. I thought it best to warn you."

"Why?" she asked calmly enough.

"I was afraid his presence might upset your play."

"Then, you were quite wrong," Patricia told him.

But, her heart had set up the old wild tumult and her hands were as cold as ice.

The fourteenth floor was jammed. Ballyhoo or no ballyhoo, the real bridge lovers of the city and their satellites had managed to collect there. The velvet-carpeted, softly lighted corridors giving on the card-rooms milled with men in evening dress and bright-eyed, eager women. It was a cosmopolitan, typically New York gathering; there were society people pausing between dinner and the theater, a dowager or two, splendid in jewels, reminiscing of the days of bridge whist, several actresses, not really interested in cards, but anxious to be seen at so smart an occasion, a sprinkling of the more reputable politicians, present by invitation, drifting uneasily here and there, a movie magnate, alert for color, a famous writer looking bored and self-conscious, waiting for his wife to complete her conversation. Professional bridge players, of course, in the majority.

Tension and excitement were in the air. People were laughing and talking, placing bets with each other on favorites for the evening, discussing the most extraordinary hand I ever held, my dear. . . .

Immediately upon their appearance Patricia and Haverholt were besieged. Patricia acknowledged introductions to dozens of people. She smiled at the movie magnate, she shook hands with the famous writer, she accepted the good wishes of a sloe-eyed, exotic actress, who had closed in the most successful play of the season just last week. Patricia felt herself carried along by a dizzying, exciting wave of popularity. Silly she knew, but she was thrilled by it. It was fun to be somebody, fun, she confessed to herself a little shamefacedly, to be Patricia Haverholt. Hero-worshippers, friends of Haverholt's, acquaintances, utter strangers, hemmed her in, exclaiming, admiring, questioning. Yes, she said over and over, it was her first tournament; yes, she was excited; thank you, she hoped to do well.

"Has Blair turned up yet?" she heard Haverholt ask someone.

"I hear he isn't coming, that his secretary will make the presentation tonight."

A little significant laugh ran through the group.

"He's ducked out because I'm an entrant," Haverholt summed it up with a laugh. "Reuben is busy trying to save his face."

The floodgates were opened. The clamor grew. The reputation of the absent host was ripped to shreds by his guests, Haverholt assisting enthusiastically. Patricia liked this less. But, just then, she glimpsed Clark Tracy, browner than when she had last seen him, tanned by the southern sun. He waved, smiled and threaded toward them.

Patricia had thought she would be shaken by the encounter. She was not. Her taste of success, the coming tournament, her own assured position, braced her so that she could greet him as she would any other casual acquaintance, naturally, simply, even a little absently. Clark must be introduced all around first, he must speak to his own friends in the group, he must add his own good wishes for the Haverholt team, before he had his moment with her, and then not alone.

"I've been back from Aiken for several days," he began, seeing his chance to get in a word. "I've been meaning to give you a ring."

"Have you?" she asked with youthful indifference.

Flushed anti lovely in the golden gown, smiling here and there, nodding, taking for granted the admiring glances that came her way, Patricia was a picture of poised and confident and exquisite girlhood. Looking down into her eyes, Clark felt a slow, unwilling stir of the pulses. He had an odd desire to capture the attention she was bestowing so lavishly upon others, to fix it upon himself. After all he had known her since her first day in the city, far longer than had any of the babbling fools who now surrounded her.

"I was sorry," he resumed awkwardly, "sorry I wasn't able to teach you to drive."

"That was all right. I understood," she told him so kindly that he felt vaguely irritated. She spoke to someone beside her, "Yes, Mr. Billings, it's true that I've played bridge since the cradle. But, my present game, of course, is based on Julian's."

Her eyes returned lazily to Clark.

He said a little stiffly, "I had been hoping that it wasn't yet too late. Or, are you driving now?"

"I'm a battle-scarred veteran," she declared gayly and with a total disregard for the truth. "I expect to tackle traffic on Monday."

"Patricia," interrupted Julian sharply, "we must go into the card rooms. They've opened the doors."

Clark held her one last moment. "Have I offended you?"

"How in the world could you?" demanded Patricia, wide-eyed. "What made you ask?"

His own voice had been low. Hers, in a lull in the general conversation, was uncomfortably distinct. The man flushed. He could not say before other listeners that she seemed less friendly. Perhaps, she did not, perhaps he only imagined a subtle change in her attitude, a change that distressed him disproportionately. He said, "I fancied for a minute that I had."

"Well, you haven't."

"Patricia, do come along, we must take our places."

"Will you and Miss Haverholt be at Belmont next week for the races?" Clark put in, hurriedly, almost desperately trying to hold them.

"I may cut my throat in the morning," drawled Julian. "On the other hand, I may be at the race track next week. I couldn't say at the moment, Clark."

And so they left him, Haverholt, grinning at Clark's discomfiture. That young man should know better than to seek a future appointment at the beginning of an important tournament.

Patricia absently agreed. Her whole mind was on the coming ordeal. The card rooms, two of them thrown together for the occasion, were severely furnished with two parallel rows of bridge tables, seven in each row, each table numbered and shining in its separate pool of light. Water pitchers and glasses, ash trays fastened to the tables, dozens of aluminum boards containing the cards, pencils, score pads; straight backed armless chairs for the players. A singularly undramatic setting, thought Patricia.

The scene itself was dramatic enough. Fifty-six professional bridge players, dissatisfied with the seating, dissatisfied with the arrangements, nervous as runners awaiting the gun, hostilely eyeing prospective opponents, giving a last word of advice to partners, quarreling with the attendants who ran to and fro trying to get everyone settled. Fifty-six professional bridge players, gathered to compete for a silver cup and the honor of winning it. The good wishes were over. The lightness was gone. Everyone kept his good wishes for himself.

No visitors were allowed. No one was allowed to watch the play. A few representatives of bridge magazines, Haverholt's and Blair's magazines among them, skulked in the background, properly authorized to copy the play and bidding of the more interesting hands at the end of the evening.

"Frightened, Patricia?" asked Haverholt.

"Not a bit," she denied, white to the lips.

"Here we are, I think. We start as North and South, table 3.

Patricia, weak-kneed, sat down, watched others seating themselves around her.

Insufficient Rest Cause Of Ills

Resistance Lowered and Body Becomes a Prey to Disease

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

PERHAPS YOU know somebody who manages to get along on a few hours of sleep and brags of his ability to do so. He is making a grave mistake. Very likely he will not listen to reason, however, until his health has been impaired.

Dr. Copeland

Insufficient sleep and rest are the chief and common causes of a run-down condition. When it reaches this state, the body is extremely susceptible to infections, contagious diseases and other serious ailments. Many suffer from chronic maladies which could have been prevented. These would have been avoided if proper measures of prevention had been taken.

Get "Early to Bed" Habit

It is indeed tragic that when it is too late there comes the desire to rest. By that time the damage has been done. The old saying, "Lock the barn door after the horse has been stolen," can well be applied to this class of citizens.

The human body is often compared to a machine. With one exception this is a good comparison. When the old parts of a machine wear out, new parts can be obtained and substituted. Unfortunately, this is not the case with the human mechanism. But wear and tear of the human body can be guarded against by taking adequate rest and by keeping in mind the body's limitations.

I cannot overemphasize the importance of the "early to bed" habit. Accustom the child to a regular bed time. By beginning in early infancy you will foster a healthful habit. This practice will greatly benefit as he grows older. Bear in mind, too, that sufficient sleep is essential to proper mental and physical development.

A Cause of Many Ills

Many children suffer from lack of sleep and rest. In consequence they have weak muscles, frail bodies, poor posture, poor complexion and deep "circles" under their eyes. They are irritable, easily vexed and have no appetite. Usually these complaints can be corrected by getting the needed sleep and rest.

In a similar way, the adult who suffers from lack of sleep and rest becomes cross and impatient with everything and everybody. He complains of many unpleasant symptoms, such as faulty digestion, liver and intestinal upsets, constipation, lack of appetite and loss of weight. As a rule, he soon becomes the victim of some chronic disorder.

Nothing is more distressing than to be unable to sleep. I am confident that many who suffer that way can trace their present difficulties to a lack of sleep in youth. Going to bed at irregular hours and neglect of the body mechanism, soon takes its effects and leads to insomnia.

Answers to Health Queries

H. B. O. Q.—I am a young man of 19 and my whole body is covered with pimples which itch, being much worse at night. They resemble a bite and are inflamed. What would you advise?

A.—It would be difficult to prescribe treatment without making an examination. Make sure that your diet is not at fault. Keep the system clear. The personal hygiene is also important. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

When Nervous—Rundown

ALL women at some period of their lives need a strengthening tonic like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Hear what Mrs. Sarah Hicks of 2167 W. 25th St., Cleveland, Ohio, says:—"During the time I was bringing up my family I became very nervous and weak. I felt exhausted all the time and pains in my back bothered me considerably. It took three or four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It certainly is the most remarkable tonic I have ever taken, in no time my health was restored and I was perfectly well again."

FATE STEPS IN

When we are prone to have our way
And take the road which seems so fair,
As laws of life we disobey
And for the future do not care;
When we advance without a thought
Of where our steps may lead us to,
We make a destiny that's fraught
With ills which we are going to rue.

When nothing seems to daunt our will
Tho we may know that we are wrong
And nothing seems to check or still
The Siren voice with captive song;
Then Fate steps in and with a dare
Takes hold of us; For help we call,
But Fate then grabs us by the hair
And bumps our head against a wall.

Fancy Dress for Cops

CHEYENNE, Wyo.—Cheyenne's police force, under Chief T. Joe Cahill, will present a natty appearance in the future. Chief Cahill, nationally known as publicity director for western dude ranches and Madison Square Garden rodeos, has ordered "very fancy" uniforms, including Sam Browne belts, for the force.

We would take that expert's advice about giving children names suiting their outstanding characteristics only we believe that as they grow older they will become less like Scarface and Benito.

Marian Martin Pattern

PATTERN 9695

A small girl will look very sweet in this little dress. The yoke is scalloped in front and plain in back. There are little bows which tie the sleeves very smartly, and a cunning collar. Her mother can make the dress omitting the lower part of the sleeves and the collar, as the small sketch shows. Use the pattern to make several different dresses; for example, it's cute made of a cotton print, and equally dainty in one of the pastel shades in plain silk or linen, or dimity.

Pattern 9695 may be ordered only in sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 4 requires 2¼ yards 36-inch fabric and ⅜ yard contrasting.

contracts under circumstances which were clearly contrary to good faith and public policy."

3. That no operating company, even remotely connected with a company or with companies manufacturing airplanes or equipment, be given an airmail contract.

4. That a maximum rate of compensation be fixed.

5. That any understandings, combinations or agreements "intended to prevent free competitive bidding" should be a basis for immediate cancellation of any involved contracts.

6. That, to insure competition, only speed, useful load capacity and safety be considered as bases for determining specifications for contracts.

7. That the interstate commerce commission be empowered to pass upon the question of public convenience and necessity of airmail routes six months before expiration of contracts, and thereafter to fix a minimum rate of airmail pay on the routes designated.

8. That, after award of a contract, the contracting company shall be granted six months to qualify under terms of the law and the bid.

CAN'T BE SUBLET

9. That no airmail contract may be sold or sublet, and that no company holding a contract be allowed to merge or consolidate with another company holding an airmail contract.

10. That maximum flying hours for pilots and minimum pay be fixed.

Such an all-inclusive program, the president stated, should go far toward insuring competition and honest operation of airmails with a fair profit for the companies involved.

So anxious is the president for enactment of the proposed legislation that he and other administration leaders plan to cut the work of congress during the rest of this session to an actual emergency basis.

Banghart on Trial In Factor Kidnaping

CHICAGO, March 8.—A jury selected in the record time of five hours today was ready to hear opening arguments in the trial of Basil Banghart, Touhy gangster, for the $70,000 ransom kidnaping of John Factor, wealthy speculator.

The Jurors were qualified to inflict the death penalty.

Roger Touhy, Gus Schaefer and Albert Kator, three other members of the Touhy gang, were convicted and sentenced to 99 years in the penitentiary two weeks ago for the same kidnaping.

Factor, the star witness at two previous trials, again will take the stand to testify, against Banghart.

THIS collection already has been enriched by the truthful account of the distinguished New York theatrical magnate who told a well-known playwright that he didn't dare to consider putting on the latter's newest piece called "The Dauphin" because he was sure the American people would never care for a play about a fish.

Then of course there is the tale told of that other and equally prominent manager who, on hearing a synopsis of a dramatization of "David Copperfield," said he liked the story and asked who the original author of the story might have been; and then, when the adaptor told him this honor had belonged to Charles Dickens said promptly:

"Well, you better get in touch with him and we'll fix up a contract and go ahead with the production."

A few days later he personally was supervising the taking of certain scenes of a comedy. In the script prepared from the author's scenario by the continuity writer he came upon a line to the effect that the leading woman should be pictured as seated alone in a deep reverie.

"Come with me, you," he said, indicating the assistant director, the leading lady and the camera-man. "I know just the place for taking this here piece of business."

He loaded the three of them into an automobile, got in himself and bade the driver take them along a certain road winding into the foothills above Los Angeles. After an hour or so of steady travel they came to where a narrow but precipitous canyon cut into the contours of the landscape. Here the leader of the expedition gave orders to halt.

"There you are," he stated, with a wave of his arm, "you could look for a week and nowhere you wouldn't find no deeper reverie for her to be setting in than what this one is."

A TELEPHONE IS THE GREATEST PROTECTION ANY-ONE CAN HAVE AGAINST FIRE!

64 ALARMS IN 1933

In the year 1933 64 calls were made for the Circleville Fire Department, according to official figures of Fire Chief Talmer Wise. These alarms were turned in from all parts of the city, at day and at night.

Following are the mediums through which the fire department was notified:

BY TELEPHONE	34 CALLS
BY MESSENGER	5 CALLS
BY ALARM BOXES	25 CALLS

As evidenced by the above figures the telephone was the most popular method used in notifying the fire department. It is always the easiest and most accessible—IF YOU HAVE ONE IN YOUR HOME! A messenger requires too much time! You have to hunt for an alarm box, in most cases! But a telephone is always at your elbow.

Here's What the City of Circleville Is Doing for YOU!

Circleville has an investment of between $30,000 and $35,000 in its fire fighting equipment and apparatus. It employs four competent and experienced men at all times to operate the department. You, as a taxpayer and citizen, have access to these facilities whenever the occasion may arise. This department of the city functions for your benefit alone—it is for YOUR protection.

Are You Doing Everything You Possibly Can For Yourself?

Are you getting full benefit of this organization that is at your beck and call at all times? Are you protecting yourself? You're not, unless you have a telephone in your home! By having telephone service at your command you are able to combat any and all emergencies if and when they arise. It is needless to say here that when you want the fire department you want it badly—and the quickest way to get it is by telephone.

Think this over seriously: for only a few cents a day you can have a telephone in YOUR home. If you consider this matter, we know you'll stop in at our business office tomorrow, or some day real soon and order a telephone installed at once.

FAVORITES CONTINUE IN COURT CONTESTS

By International News Service

Basketball was placed in the center of the stage in Ohio today as high school regional tournaments swung into action, aiming toward the grand climax - the championship classic scheduled in Columbus March 15.

Favorites were fairly sailing right along with the dope today and it appeared that unless some 'dark horse" entry bursts in and upsets everything the state finals will be fought out by the predicted "chosen few."

While the scarlet fever bogey gummed things up in the regional schedule at Findlay, the Class A southeastern district tournament got under way last night with Marietta, runner-up in the state finals last year, continuing its mad pace by downing Ironton, 21 to 14.

SEVENTEEN IN ROW

The victory was Marietta's 17th consecutive win in succession and placed them as the odds-on favorite to cop the state title this year.

Other teams regarded as dangerous threats, likewise came through with convincing victories. Pomeroy defeated Washington C. H., 31 to 6; Portsmouth upset Greenfield, 22 to 18; Chillicothe turned back New Lexington's valiant charge, 20 to 13; Hillsboro won from Logan, 26 to 15, and Nelsonville took a heart-breaker from Gallipolis, 15 to 14.

A preliminary round was held at Akron last night and there, too, the favorites smashed through with flying colors. The results follow: Akron West, 29, Massillon, 24; Akron Garfield, 30, Euclid Shore, 26; St. Vincents, 24, Louisville, 21 (two overtimes); Wadsworth, 15, Kent Roosevelt, 14.

OTHERS ON TODAY

District tournaments at Findlay, Dayton, Denison and Kent were to get under way today, while the central district meets will start tomorrow at Columbus and Westerville.

The Findley tournament was pitched into a jumble as the result of the withdrawal of the Bowling Green and Napoleon squads, which are down with the scarlet fever bugaboo.

The eastern district crown is expected to go to Dover High, last year's state champion. Although the Dover team is believed to be a little under the ability of last year's squad, it is expected to have the edge on its toughest opponents —New Philadelphia, East Liverpool and Cambridge.

The winner in the central district appears to be a toss-up between Columbus East, Newark, and Lancaster.

RATTAN IS VICTOR

COLUMBUS, March 8.—A smashing back-slam today had brought victory to "Silent" Rattan, flashy Texas deaf mute wrestler after 36 minutes of torrid battling with Don Cortez, the clever little Spanish welterweight at the Auditorium here last night.

In the other main go on the evening's program, Nanjo Singh, the Hindu wrestler, although handicapped by a severely wrenched and swollen left leg, dropped Tony Gusto, Rochester, N. Y., Italian, with a series of tremendous elbow blows to the jaw. The fall came after eight minutes and 43 seconds of bitter mauling on the part of both contestants.

KOENECKE SLUGS

ORLANDO, Fla., March 8.—Len Koenecke, for whom the late John McGraw paid $75,000 when he was pastiming in the American association, was the talk of the Brooklyn Dodgers' camp today. Koenecke punched the ball to all corners of the lot as Manager Casey Stengel sent his charges through a stiff workout yesterday.

Bob Quinn, General manager of the club, declared he was unworried by the fact that four regulars have not yet returned signed contracts.

HELPLESS CRIPPLE KILLED IN FLAMES

MARIETTA, March 8.—Miss Caroline Tice, 43, a helpless cripple since birth, was burned to death when fire destroyed her home in the hills of Independence-twp, 25 miles east of Marietta, yesterday afternoon, it was learned today.

Absence of telephones made it necessary for neighbors to drive to Marietta to summon the county coroner.

Miss Tice was alone in the house when the fire broke out. Her aged mother, Mrs. Mary Tice, a widow, was working outside in the yard.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

ANOTHER colorful figure had been added to the Big Ten today when it was announced A. N. "Bo" McMillan, former Centre college quarterback, had been signed as head football coach at the University of Indiana * * * McMillan's addition is indeed welcomed in the Big Ten * * * He can take his place beside Kizer, Zuppke, Kipke, Hanley, and other tried Big Ten mentors as well as Francis Schmidt, who begins his work this spring at Ohio State

* * *

McMillen came into prominence when his Centre College team defeated a great Harvard eleven, 6-0, to gain recognition for the Praying Colonels from Kentucky * * *

High school class games begin in the school gymnasium Friday evening * * * They will continue until a winner has been decided * * * Varsity men are coaching the undergrads * * * The first game will be at 7 p. m. between freshmen and sophomore boys * * * The second will be freshman girls against the combined junior-senior girls, and the third will be junior boys against senior boys * * * John Heiskell and Pete Stout will officiate and there will be an admission charge of 10 and 5 cents, the proceeds going to buy banners for the winners * * *

AKRON West, a power in state tournaments in the past several years with the Averitt boys leading the way, became a threat in the Northeast Ohio tourney, Wednesday, defeating Massillon's strong team, 29-24 * * * Massillon was defeated in the semifinals of the state meet last year by Dover's champions after beating Akron West in the opening game of the meet * * * Wadsworth ousted Kent Roosevelt which team defeated Akron North previous victor over Barberton, and Akron Garfield eliminated Euclid Shore Hi * * *

* * *

Denny Shute holed a nine-foot putt to give himself and Al Espinosa of Akron the international four-ball professional championship over Paul Runyan and Horton Smith at Miami, Fla., Wednesday * * * The victory gives Shute and Espinosa each $750, Runyan and Smith collecting $500 each * * *

Will War Come?

this aim had secretly promised Rumania territorial integrity. Coming to the ears of the Hungarians, this so angered them that although they maintain correct relations with Italy, the old friendship has cooled, and Hungary has secretly turned her thoughts to Germany as the knight who will break her chains.

FAILED IN LURE

Italy wanted to lure Rumania out of the little entente. She failed in that and at the same time, by the attempt, lost Hungary. That left Italy with only Bulgaria and Albania.

The Albanian-Italian alliance is vital for Italy. Albania controls the mouth of the Adriatic. In Jugoslav hands Albania could blockade the Adriatic and stopper up every Italian port on her east coast from Trieste to Bari. It was therefore natural that when King Zog came to power in Tirana in 1924, Italy should lend him money. She lent him as a starter $10,000,000 gold in 1925.

In return, Italy got military control of Albania. When the time came to renew the pact, Italy promised another $4,000,000 but times grew hard, money scarce and until today she is believed to have paid no more than $1,750,000. In Albania gifts keep friendship warm and when gifts fail, friendship cools. King Zog was annoyed. He sent his best diplomat, Mehemet Konitze to Belgrade to negotiate a "trade treaty." The net result has been a decided loosening of the Italian hold on Albania.

All that Italy has retained undamaged is the friendship with Bulgaria. King Boris married the daughter of the King of Italy. Bulgaria also could be very useful to Italy in case of a Jugoslav-Italian war.

It is obvious that for the time being France has the upper hand in the Balkans. How long will that last when Germany comes back into the game? Ever since the war, until Hitler came to power, Germany has played no role down here. Before the war the central powers of course dominated the Balkans, although Rumania, waiting to spot the bandwagon, finally leaped on the French car, missed her hold, and was crushed by the German steamroller.

RESPECTS GERMANY

Will Rumania do that again? She has an immense respect for the German military machine. When and if Germany and Austria are united, and Hungary joins the German block, the Germans will be to all intents and purposes neighbors of Rumania. King Carol is a Hohenzollern. The Iron-Guard are pro-German.

The chief thing that stands between Rumania and Germany under these circumstances is the fact that Rumania possesses in Transylvania 62,222 square kilometers of territory she took from Hungary. But a prominent Rumanian politician told me he considered it perfectly possible that Rumania and Hungary might one day come to an agreement over Transylvania.

The forces that play in international politics are much like the forces that move the heavenly bodies. The larger the planet the more attractive force it has. As Germany grows from month to month in strength, and especially if she gets Austria and more especially after she is completely rearmed, her attractive force toward the smaller powers grows perceptibly. France today still has her guns and her gold. But the discount value of her treaty system has already fallen below par.

Germanys mere intention of acquiring a big army has already changed the constellation of European politics considerably. When she actually has it they will change still more, and who knows but that Regent Horthy may be right when he opined Germany would get what she wanted without fighting for it.

Tomorrow—The part Bulgaria plays in "Will War Come."

Surprise Socialist

While her capitalist husband still claims allegiance to the G. O. P., Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, 3rd, has embraced Socialism, it was recently revealed. The name of Mrs. Rockefeller, formerly Miss Blanchette Huntington Hooker, appears on the rolls of the Socialist party, just made public.

MOVIES

AT THE GRAND

J. Carrol Naish, who assays more menace per pound than almost any other screen bad man, has the part of "Chopper" Allen, enemy of Spencer Tracy, Claire Trevor and Ralph Morgan in "The Mad Game," Fox feature now showing at the Grand Theater. Others in the cast are Howard Lally, John Miljan, Matt McHugh, Kathleen Burke, Mary Mason, Willard Robertson, John Davidson, Paul Fix and Jerry Devine. Irvin Cummings directed.

AT THE CLIFTONA

The World's Fair Premier revue presents its opening performance at 11:30 p. m. this evening in a burst of gala entertainment.

Twelve seaplanes manned by crack pilots, instructors at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, and nine submarine chasers fully equipped with the modern implements of warfare and manned by four hundred officers and cadets from the same institution, are seen in thrilling action in sham war manoeuvres in the gripping climax of "Midshipman Jack," RKO-Radio Pictures' romance with Bruce Cabot and Betty Furness coming to the Cliftona Theatre Friday and Saturday.

The warcraft depicts how aviators and submarine chasers attack invading enemy underwater craft. In the tense climax, a plane and subchaser are shown in a head on collision, said to be one of the most thrilling stunts ever staged for a motion picture production.

"Midshipman Jack" features Bruce Cabot as a recalcitrant cadet who becomes entangled in adventurous and romantic intrigue when he breaks his probation. The picture was filmed at Annapolis, and also features Betty Furness, Frank Albertson, John Darrow, Purnell Pratt and Arthur and Florence Lake in the cast. Christy Cabanne directed from an adaptation of his own story.

WILL WAR COME?

Rumania's Oil Fields Make Nation's Stand In European Controversy Important.

'PROMISES' IN AIR

Transylvania Ownership May Become Muted Problem, Too.

EDITOR'S NOTE—
Rumania's rich oil fields make that country's alliances a matter of deep concern to all Europe, H. R. Knickerbocker writes in this article of his series "Will War Come."

Neither France nor Germany has any significant supply of oil and with motorized armies the matter of oil looms large in connection with war.

By H. R. Knickerbocker

Copyright, 1934, By International News Service. Reproduction in whole or part forbidden.

BUCHAREST, March 8.—This is the deep Balkins. The stamp of Turkey is on it. You count your change, watch your luggage. You also watch your political treaties. Every year you go back and make the same treaty over again and again and every few months your foreign minister visits all the other foreign ministers to find out if they still mean what they said.

In the deep Balkans policemen go in threes. The secret service, Siguranza, is almost as good as Russia's G. P. U. The food is good, the beer undrinkable, tablecloths soiled. Rumania is far away from Europe.

But Europe has its eye on Rumania. Because Europe is war-scared, and modern armies are motorized, and motors need oil and Rumania has oil.

A column of flame [illegible] yards high and three [illegible] flares against the morning sky as the Orient express from Vienna to Bucharest speeds past the mid-Rumanian oil fields. The conductor calls the passengers to look. "Been burning for months," he says. "There's another one been burning for years."

HAS "OIL TO BURN"

Rumania has oil literally to burn. So much that they don't bother to put the fire out. Rumania's oil could turn the tide in war time. Neither France nor Germany has any significant supplies of oil. The two chief rivals on the continent are equally dependent on oil from abroad. But France has a fleet and in war time can protect her imports from overseas. Germany has next to no fleet, and reckons on being blockaded in case of war. Germany logically has the greatest interest in securing a safe source of oil.

To get it she will have to play Balkan politics. But Hitler has proven he knows how to play every kind of politics. Today, since the signing of the Polish-German non-aggression pact nobody in Europe will venture to put a limit on what the third Reich may accomplish in breaking up the French system of alliances.

For the Polish pact knocked the first large hole in that system. To understand the background for the question "Will War Come in Europe?" And especially to understand the significance of the Balkans it is necessary to recall how the hostile alliances are lined up.

The French system consists of straight military pacts of mutual defence between France and Poland, France and Czecho-Slovakia, France and Rumania. France and Jugoslavia, France and Belgium. The succession states formed out of the wreckage of the Austro-Hungarian empire, Czechoslovakia, Jugoslavia and Rumania, are in turn united in the little entente. Rumania and Poland, back in 1922 when both were frightened of invasion by Russia, signed a military alliance.

FRENCH SYSTEM

This is the French system. The Italian system has been its principal rival. The basis of that system has been the Italian-Hungarian, Italian - Bulgarian, Italian-Albanian treaties of varying degrees of friendship. Most important was the Italian-Hungarian treaty of 1926, as a treaty of friendship but believed to be really a military treaty.

One of its clauses was believed to provide that in case of an Italian-Jugoslav war, while Italian troops drove for Zagreb, Hungary would put two army corps into the socalled Mur island, the triangle between the Mur and the Drau rivers in the northeast corner of Jugoslavia next to the Hungarian border, which would be the most effective way to divide the Jugoslav forces.

In the Balkans, it may be further recalled, they are realists. Italy in return was believed to have promised to support Hungary's claims for revision against Czechoslovakia but also against Rumania. It happened however that Italy was also trying to make friends with Rumania, since she could be very useful to Italy in case of a Jugoslav-Italian war. Early in 1933 it was reported that Italy in pursuit of

C. OF C. ASKS COUNCIL FOR TRAFFIC SURVEY

Organization in Signed Letter Urges Economy in Traffic Light Operation; Says It Believes Investigation Would Show Some Present Lights as Not Needed.

Council today had on file a request from the Chamber of Commerce that a careful traffic survey be made before any additional traffic lights are erected at the street's various intersections.

The request was made in the form of a communication signed by Mack Parrett, Jr., secretary, and endorsed by the directors of the organization. Upon motion of Councilman Frank Marion the request was received and filed.

At its last session council discussed traffic light possibilities at several locations and placed the matter in the hands of the safety committee, Marion, Helwagen, and Leist, and the safety director, Leroy T. Shaner, with power to act. Mr. Marion in a statement after the communication was read said he wished the Chamber of Commerce would have discussed the matter with the committee in whose hands it had been placed.

WOULD TEST VOLUME

The letter urged that traffic in all directions be surveyed over a considerable period of time at the intersections in question to establish the definite need for traffic lights. "Cities make such a survey when a request is made for traffic lights and definite standards of volume of traffic in all directions must exceed certain volume before lights are installed," the communication read.

"We suggest that data be secured on such requirements," the letter continued, "and that surveys be made on all proposed and also all existing traffic lighted corners. It is the opinion of this body that if such a survey be made, it will be found that there is not sufficient traffic to justify some of the existing traffic lights, and by their elimination, the money now spent for their operation can be well used to help pay the added policemen." An earlier paragraph in the letter lauded the additional police protection.

COMPARE CHILLICOTHE

The letter went on to say: "Added traffic experience is enabling the car driver to drive safely without the assistance of mechanical traffic signals. Traffic lights were once required where none are now needed. Chillicothe with vastly more traffic than we have is able to handle that greater traffic with less traffic accidents with only three traffic lights.

"It is our hope that instead of increasing the tax burden with additional lights, it will be found possible to cut the city operating expense by eliminating some of the existing lights and at the same time decrease the traffic accidents now caused because someone claims "I had the light."

"It is not significant that Circleville with six traffic lights has more traffic accidents than Chillicothe where there are only half as many?

"Every traffic light that can be eliminated saves the city about $72 per year."

Councilman William Reid took exceptions to the statement in the letter which said money used for traffic lights could be used to help pay additional policemen.

McCaw Addresses Rotary; Speaks at Two Legion Meetings This Evening.

Reciting the program and ideals of the American Legion, Thomas McCaw, of Dennison, commander of the Ohio department of the legion, addressed the Rotary club in the New American Hotel Coffee Shoppe at noon today.

He is scheduled to attend a banquet for members of Howard Hall post and the auxiliary at 6 p. m. Thursday in Memorial Hall and to address a meeting of ex-service men also in Memorial Hall at 8 o'clock.

Mr. McCaw named the Legion's ideals as (1) rehabilitation of comrades and dependents; (2) education of youth; (3) full service to community, state, and nation.

He also explained the four point national program which he plans to go into in further detail at the meetings tonight.

"The American Legion," he said "is always interested in the education of the youth of the nation. We believe economy is necessary in many instances but we do not believe the schools should be handicapped by drastic reductions. Every community should provide adequate educational facilities for all nations."

Commander McCaw discussed the Junior baseball leagues and Boy Scout troops sponsored by the Legion, and stressed school awards to worthy boy and girl students.

"I believe parents and citizens should be more interested in the schools and assist the teachers and boards of education in solving their problems," he declared.

He closed his interesting talk by saying: "The American Legion is always ready to serve."

Swedish Prince, Commoner, Wed

LONDON, March 8. — Renouncing royal prerogatives, Prince Sigvard, second son of Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf of Sweden, was married in a simple civil ceremony today to Miss Erika Patzek, pettite, blonde actress, daughter of a Berlin merchant.

Over-riding strenuous efforts of the Swedish royal family to prevent the match, Prince Sigvard walked into the Caxton hall registry office shortly before noon, his bride-to-be on his arm.

He emerged a few minutes later—a very few minutes later—as plain "Mr. Bernadotte."

After their honeymoon the couple plan to return to the Berlin motion picture studio where they met, Sigvard as assistant director and his bride as an actress in minor roles.

'Penny Ante' Gang Sought In 4 Holdups

Franklin-Co Sheriff Says Same Men Robbed Galena, Delaware, Carey Banks.

COLUMBUS, March 8.—The band of bandits who invaded banks at Westerville and Galena yesterday, is believed to be the same gang responsible for other holdups recently at Delaware and at Carey, O., Sheriff Ross Anderson of Franklin-co, revealed today.

Sheriff Anderson said the band, known to officials here as "the penny ante gang," is comprised of three or four men and one woman.

He declared that their manner of staging the holdups yesterday was similar to that of the bandits who held up the Delaware County National Bank last January 17 and obtained $10, and later held up a bank at Carey, O., and obtained $75.

The bandits who invaded the Westerville and Galena banks yesterday got only $284 for their trouble. Failing to obtain any loot at all in the Westerville attempt, the gang succeeded in lifting $284 from the Bank of Galena.

Sheriff Anderson said the gang is called the "Penny Ante gang," because "all they ever got is the counter change in the banks."

WELL GUARDED DURING TRIAL

Harry Pierpont, one of three accomplices of John Dillinger, notorious killer, is photographed in Lima, O., courtroom, as his trial got under way. Pierpont is charged with the slaying of Sheriff Jess Sarber of Allen-co, Ohio, when he set John Dillinger free from jail. In the background is Sheriff Don Sarber, son of the slain sheriff, with machine gun in hand.

NINE EXECUTED

MEXICO CITY, March 8.—Nine members of the Agrarian, or Peasants' party, were executed by a firing squad at Tlalixcoyan, state of Vera Cruz, today.

An army colonel, whose name was withheld, ordered the execution, according to meagre reports received here.

SENATOR LLOYD'S AUTO IS DAMAGED

State Senator John A. Lloyd, of Portsmouth, enroute to Columbus to attend a session of the Ohio legislature, was uninjured Thursday morning when his Ford automobile skidded in N. Court-st and tore some small trees from the ground in front of the Harvard Crist residence.

Senator Lloyd's son, who accompanied him, also was unhurt.

The slush-covered highway was blamed for the accident.

The right rear wheel was broken off the Ford which was taken to the Reliable Motors Co. for repairs.

SALES TAXES FACE DEFEAT

Rural Legislators Line Up Solidly Against Plan; Substitute Is Written.

COLUMBUS, March 8.—Gov. George White's 3 per cents sales tax fund itself in the midst of a hurricane of opposition today as legislators from rural districts lined up solidly to oppose it.

Sponsored by Rep. Robert E. Kaser (D) Sidney, and Rep. Jerome N. Curtis (D) Cleveland, an independent permanent tax program was offered in the House of Representatives as a substitute for the administration's set-up based on the sales tax.

As outlined by Kaser, the independent substitute program contains five major planks, viz.:

1. An income tax as the foundation.
2. An increase in the utilities excise tax greater than the 1 per cent boost recommended by the administration.
3. A state tax on all chain stores.
4. An increase from two to three mills of the intangible tax rate on deposits in financial institutions.
5. A tax of 50 cents for each $100 of all mortgages filed, the revenue to go to counties, municipalities and townships.

SCIOTO CANAL CASE IS OPEN

Delegations to Gather in Columbus to Discuss Route's Advisability.

A delegation of Circleville civic leaders are planning to go to Columbus, Friday, to attend a hearing on the contemplated Scioto-Sandusky route for the Ohio to Lake Erie barge canal.

Major W. D. Styer, chief of the corps of army engineers of the Pittsburgh district, studying the project, will be in charge of the meeting. He was conducting a similar meeting in Dayton today on the advisabilty of the route going through the Great Miami and Maumee rivers. The Cincinnati-Toledo route is one of those considered.

Proponents of the Beaver-Mahoning or Pittsburgh-Ashtabula route will be given hearings at Youngstown March 13.

Plans for the proposed Scioto-Sandusky program are being held up pending a report from the army engineers now making a survey of the district, it was learned. Alan N. Jordon, executive secretary of an organization recently set up to work toward the establishment of a conservancy district, said the project is being delayed also until the Muskingum valley conservancy program is at the construction stage.

Mr. Jordon is scheduled to speak here next Tuesday before the Chamber of Commerce on the flood control plans.

The personnel of the delegation which will attend the Columbus meeting is not yet certain.

MAYOR CADY WARNS OF DANGEROUS ACTS

Issues Warning to School Children Who Throw Ice Balls, and Darts

Several practices which have gained headway among school children were ordered stopped today by Mayor W. B. Cady.

One is throwing of ice balls on the streets. Several injuries have been reported and much danger accompanies such "sport."

Another is shooting of pin darts by use of rubber bands, another "sport" which is very dangerous.

Third is overloading automobiles traveling to and from school. One automobile driven to school by a local youth carried 12 fellow-students from school one noon this week. There is an ordinance against such action.

Mayor Cady warned that violators of these orders will be subject to arrest.

KENAGY AND MOYER ARE TRANSFERRED

A. W. Kenagy, N. Court-st, who has been local agent of the Railway Express Co., has been transferred to Xenia, and Richard Moyer, who has been truck driver for the local office, has been sent to the Gallipolis agency. Mr. Moyer has been promoted to agent.

Thomas Burk, formerly of Gallipolis, has been named to the local office.

FLYER UNHURT

MARION, March 8. Carburetor trouble was blamed today for the forced landing near here late yesterday of an army airplane piloted by John L. Sheridan assigned to the Cleveland army airmail headquarters from Langley Field, Va.

Length of Power Firm's Franchise is Questioned

Solicitor Carl C. Leist has been instructed by council to write to Attorney General John W. Bricker seeking an opinion concerning the length of the franchise owned by the Southern Ohio Electric Co., for operation in Circleville.

The matter was broached in the council meeting, Wednesday evening, by Ben H. Gordon who asked that an attorney general's opinion be sought.

The outcome of the question would have much bearing on whether or not the city ever plans municipal ownership of its power plant. Some local persons who have been discussing the municipal ownership question believe it would be impossible to successfully operate such a plant if the private utility would remain in the field. Electric company officials declare they have a perpetual franchise in Circleville.

OTHER COUNCIL BUSINESS

Placed the matter of water from the Eshelman Milling Co. running in open gutters on Clinton, Mill, and Union-sts in the hands of the service committee. The question was presented by Councilman Ben Gordon.

Received the report of Mayor W. B. Cady that fines during February totalled $56.70 and fees $26.10, making a total of $82.80.

Heard receipts of Berger hospital for February which amounted to $515.

Listened to Clerk Fred Nicholas read the water ordinance for the second time after the ordinance committee reported it out for second reading without recommendation. Also instructed the clerk to notify Fosdick and Hilmer, Cincinnati engineers, to appear at the March 21 meeting to discuss the water ordinance. The engineers still owe the city two meetings under their $2,300 contract.

Discussed plans for the new city jail for which funds will be sought under the Public Works administration. W. E. Austin, architect, appeared with his drawings. This discussion, in committee session, lasted over an hour.

Appropriated $150 to pay for the right-of-way through the Voll land in the northend for construction of the storm water sewer now under construction, and $1 to pay the Norfolk and Western for touching its land.

RUNAWAY LOGAN-CO BOYS CAUGHT HERE

Bellefontaine authorities were to come here, Thursday, to return two runaways to Logan-co. The boys, Albert Parker and Phillip Troyer, aged 15 and 13, were found at the Crites Oil Co. station, S. Court-st, Wednesday night, by Officer Karl Radcliff.

They admitted they were runaways and were turned over to Juvenile Officer Frank Goff Thursday morning. He called Bellefontaine to notify local juvenile authorities.

ROOSEVELT OPENS WAY FOR RETURN OF PRIVATE AIRMAIL

WASHINGTON, March 8.—President Roosevelt informally asked Congress today to legislate the quick return of the airmail to commercial aviation.

Enactment of the president's program, as interpreted in official circles, would mak many of the old operating companies eligible to bid on mail contracts which, and only which, they were divested themselves of at connection with officials who had a part in the securing of the government contracts which the government considered contrary to "good faith and public policy."

Formal requests for a new deal in airmail went forward in identical letters dispatched by the president to Senate and House postal committees. Mr. Roosevelt asked for a law which would avoid the evils of the past and promote development of aviation. He outlined virtually every objective in the letters. The law he asked would provide:

"COMPETITIVE BIDS"

1. That new airmail contracts be let to commercial companies for three year periods, after "full, open and fair" competitive bidding.

2. That no contract should be made with any company new or old, "any of whose officers were party to the obtaining of former

"No Trespassing on Government Corner," Postmaster States

Circleville residents were warned, Thursday, by Postmaster Hulse Hays that the Hohen-Schleyer property at Court and Mound-sts is now owned by the government and no trespassing is allowed.

A number of persons have gone on the grounds, Mr. Hays said, and several shrubs and plants have been taken. This is strictly unlawful and will not be tolerated. "I do not want to be arbitrary," the postmaster said, "but I have orders to keep everyone off the grounds."

MRS. HOLLEY FACES FIGHT

Request For Ouster Being Prepared by Prosecutor; Cites Neglect of Duty.

CROWN POINT, Ind., March 8.—Mrs. Lillian Holley, Indiana's only woman sheriff, today faced possible ouster proceedings as the investigation into the escape of John Dillinger, super-desperado, from the county jail gained momentum.

Four more state investigators were sent here from Indianapolis by Philip Lutz, Jr., attorney general, who announced:

"Every hour we get more information that leads us to believe that the delivery did not just happen, but was planned. Dillinger had help."

Two of Sheriff Holley's helpers, Deputy Sheriff Ernest Blunk and Turnkey Sam Cahoon are under arrest.

TO FILE REQUESTS

Prosecutor Robert Estill and Edward Barce, assistant attorney general, were reported to be drafting an information to be filed before Circuit Judge Joseph Sullivan of Lake-co seeking the sheriff's removal for neglect of duty in connection with Dillinger's flight.

But despite the pressure being brought to bear on the slight, blonde lady sheriff she refused to relinquish her office.

The widespread search for Dillinger thus far has failed to bring forth any information concerning his whereabouts. Dillinger was scheduled to go to trial next Monday for the murder of an East Chicago, Ind., policeman during a bank robbery.

CONVICTED DOCTOR IS IN SEMI-STUPOR

CHICAGO, March 8.—Her brain seemingly numbed by the jury's verdict finding her guilty of the operating table murder of Rheta Gardner Wynekoop, Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop lay in a semi-stupor today in the county jail.

The 63-year-old physician was given a 25 year penitentiary sentence as punishment for the weird murder of her daughter-in-law, Rheta.

Jail physicians kept a close watch over the aged woman doctor whose heart ailment brought a sudden halt to the first trial.

"I feel ill—my heart," she told members of her family who visited her at the jail. "I can't talk. I want to be left alone to think."

LIMA TENSE AS PIERPONT TRIAL OPENS

Possibility of Dillinger Striking Keeps Allen-co City Electrified

KILLER IS NERVOUS

Jury Complete; 'Trigger Man' Talks with Mother

LIMA, March 8.—When Harry Pierpont, reputed Dillinger gang gunman, was arrested in Tucson, Ariz., for the slaying of Sheriff Jess L. Sarber, a snub-nosed revolver owned by the slain officer was found in the outlaw's pocket, Ernest M. Botkin, Allen county prosecutor, declared today in his opening statement at Pierpont's first degree murder trial here.

Addressing the jury of ten men and two women, finally chosen to comprise the jury in a night session of the court last night, Prosecutor Botkin gave vivid and dramatic recital of the gang invasion of the Allen-co jail last October 12 when Sheriff Sarber was shot down in cold blood and gang leader John Dillinger was liberated.

Botkin charged that Pierpont planned the jail delivery of Dillinger as a gesture of gratitude for Dillinger's assistance in working the Michigan City, Ind., prison break last September 26.

LIMA, March 8.—Tenseness wrought of fears over the whereabouts of John Dillinger, fugitive, about the city of Lima, [illegible] as testimony was scheduled to [illegible] in the first degree murder [illegible] of the gangleader's chief [illegible] ant, Harry Pierpont.

The way was paved for the actual start of the trial last night when a jury of ten men and two women was completed and sworn in after two days of verbal [illegible] gling between opposing attorneys.

Continued lack of definite [illegible] as to the exact whereabouts of Dillinger, who broke out of the Crown Point, Ind., jail last Saturday, kept the city worried that the desperado may be awaiting an opportune time to stage a surprise invasion and attempt to liberate Pierpont, who is accused of the murder of Sheriff Jess L. Sarber, slain last October when Dillinger himself was freed from the Allen-co jail.

GUARDS FILL CITY

The numerous reports that Dillinger has been sighted here or there in scattered sections of the middle-west served only to intensify the "jitteriness" of the city, despite the fact that the county jail and the county courthouse for blocks around are encircled with a closelywoven web of armed guards, recruited from the Ohio National Guard and local and county officers.

A rumor ran through the city like wild-fire late yesterday that Dillinger had been reported seen in the vicinity of Mt. Vernon, O., four counties away. It turned out, however, that the reports concerned a chase being given in that

YEGGS GET $50,000 IN DAYLIGHT THEFT

GREENVILLE, S. C., March 8.—In a bold daylight holdup in the heart of the downtown district, two unmasked white bandits today robbed a South Carolina national bank messenger of a mail pouch containing $50,000 in currency.

The bandits, brandishing revolvers, forced the bank messengers' car to the curb as he drove to the bank from the postoffice, snatched the bag of money and sped out of town toward Atlanta.

The bandit car, a small wine-colored coach, bore North Carolina license tags.

Prosecuting Attorney Ernest Botkin made it plainly evident in questioning the prospective jurors during the last two days that he intends to ask the death penalty for the reputed Dillinger "trigger-man."

JURY DIVIDED

The jury which will weigh the fate of Pierpont is composed of three farmers, two merchants, two tool-makers, a realestate dealer, a church janitor and two housewives.

Members of the regular jury are:

C. T. Clantz of Spencerville, a farmer.

George T. Kempf of Lima, a tool and die worker.

Martin O'Brien of Lima, a retired merchant.

C. D. Hilty of Bluffton, a tool and die worker.

H. R. Hefner of Lafayette, a farmer.

Ross McCallum of Lima, a real estate dealer.

Kathryn Clutter of Lima, a housewife.

Carl Landwehr of Delphos, a bee-keeper.

Mary E. Dale of Lima, a housewife.

Amos Evans of Cairo, a merchant.

William Kidd of Bluffton, a farmer.

Charles Lehman of Delphos, a church janitor.

A 13th, alternative juror also was selected. She was Miss Florence Rice of Delphos, a state relief commission stenographer.

Pierpont was restless throughout the selection of the jury. He frequently crossed and uncrossed his legs, causing the 15 pounds of chain with which he was manacled, to clank harshly through the stillness of the courtroom. When he was taken back to the jail for the night, the accused killer kissed his mother goodnight.

TALKED WITH MOTHER

During a recess of the court yesterday. Pierpont was allowed to talk with his mother for the first time. Although he had seen her in court every day since the hearing started, he had not been allowed to speak to her.

Mrs. Pierpont smothered her son in her arms and kissed him repeatedly.

During the selection of the jury last night, Sheriff Don Sarber, 24-year-old "college-boy" son of the slain officer who succeeded his father as sheriff of Allen-co, disclosed to newspapermen that Pierpont had attempted to bribe a deputy sheriff with $2,000 for a gun.

The young sheriff said that Pierpont made the offer for the gun to a special deputy in a jocular manner.

"But I do not doubt that he would have tried to arrange a deal if the deputy had been interested," said the sheriff.

Saber denied, however, that he had apprehended a deputy in the act of smuggling a gun into a cell. Because the deputy had been assigned to a different post, the reports had been circulated. He said he would rotate all deputies at intervals.

"I don't want any of my deputies to get too friendly with these gangsters," he declared.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

Rehabilitation of the Labor Department Under Frances Perkins

WASHINGTON — No branch of the government needed a New Deal more desperately than the Department of Labor a year ago. Nine years of 'Puddler Jim' Davis, plus three years of Bill Doak, had reduced it to the gutter-level. Labor feared and distrusted it. Many employers viewed it with contempt and disgust. The public at large scarcely knew it existed, or cared.

The year that Frances Perkins has ruled over the Labor Department has witnessed a rehabilitation of its repute, integrity, and efficiency.

Today its statistics are accepted in the most critical quarters without question. The Red-hunting antics of the Doak regime are a thing of the past. Order, decency, intelligence, liberalism dominate its affairs. And yet—

The year has been no commensurate enhancement in Miss Perkins' popularity.

Her achievements are acknowledged and admired. Her unquestionable ability is conceded. That she is a potent and liberal force in the New Deal is admitted. Yet, while she has 'sold" her achievements and capabilities, she has not 'sold" herself.

It is significant that of all the New Deal agencies, the United States Employment Service - under her jurisdiction - was the only one slashed on Capitol Hill.

There is a reason—and it has given her trouble with both Congress and the press.

Bossy

There was no New Dealer, not even excepting the President, whom the press and Congress were more ready to welcome than Miss Perkins. They had laughed at Davis, despised Doak. They looked forward to a competent executive at the head of the long-suffering Labor Department.

But Madame Secretary had been in office only a few weeks before the press and Capitol Hill discovered that she classed them both in the category of bothersome nuisances. Miss Perkins was aloof, brusque and bossy. When Tacoma's crusading Senator Homer T. Bone sought to protest her appointment of a reactionary anti-laborite as unemployment supervisor of Washington, she curtly refused to see him. When Pat Harrison, chairman of the powerful Senate Finance Committee, called at her office, she let him cool his heels for half an hour, and then rushed off without seeing him. Before Congressional committees she speaks with commanding brilliance, but a distinctly tutorial manner.

This is deeply resented.

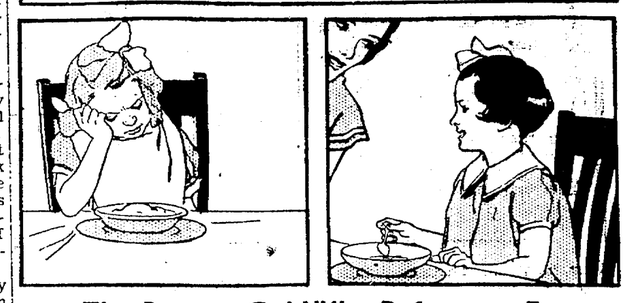
Despite her old-maidish disposition, Miss Perkins enjoys a happy married life. Her husband is Paul Wilson, a New York statistician. She has one daughter and one pet hobby - collecting patchwork quilts. At Mt. Holyoke where she went to college, Miss Perkins was nicknamed the 'Loquacious Linguist" and once played the part of Brutus in 'The Lamentable Tragedy of Julius Caesar."

Miss Perkins has one quality perhaps to a greater degree than any of her Cabinet colleagues—courage. She is one of the few who will stand up and tell the President exactly what she thinks, no matter how strenuously he may disagree.

Although not reputed to be a good organizer, Miss Perkins has made several good appointments. One was Edward F. McGrady, first assistant secretary, another Dr. Isador Lubin, Commissioner of Labor Statistics. McGrady is one of the ablest, most liberal and widely esteemed Labor leaders, but just because he was pushed by Jim Farley, Miss Perkins spurned him at first as if he were poison. Finally she saw how he operated as aide to General Johnson and welcomed him into her official family.

New York follows New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland in the list of states that have lost their peach crops. Why isn't the parsnip corp ever ruined?

Whose Fault?



The Boy or Girl Who Refuses to Eat

"What have I ever done to deserve a child who refuses to eat, and is just skin and bones?" The mother who asks that question might be surprised to learn that she alone is to blame. She knows a lack of appetite is the sign of a clogged system, but does the wrong thing to remedy the condition. A violent cathartic that upsets the stomach pulls down a child like a spell of sickness. It often forms the laxative habit. A more sensible way of regulating children is explained in the column to the right:

It's a lucky girl whose mother knows how to regulate her children's bowels without some strong, evil-tasting cathartic that upsets the system and ruins their appetite! Whenever sluggishness coats the little tongue, makes the whites of the eyes a bilious yellow, or a child is headachy and fretful, just try pure California Syrup of Figs. The senna in this fruity laxative is so agreeable to take, so natural in action! Get real California Syrup of Figs at any drug store. The bottle should say 'California

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The government was definitely set today upon the road to a 10 per cent reduction in hours and a 10 per cent increase in pay for the workers.

Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson made it plain at the closing session of the code authorities assembled here, the government was firm in its resolve to obtain a "ten and ten" pact with every industry that cannot prove a legitimate exemption, and that he will remain as administrator of the NRA so long as President Roosevelt desires him.

He admitted some industries cannot assume the extra burden of the plan but held it was "proper to encourage increased wages and reduced hours per week," despite the almost universal protest that has been heard during the past three-day meeting of the code authorities.

SOME UNABLE

"There are some industries that could not do what I tentatively suggested about wages and hours" Johnson said. "There are some where business is so little that, if they did adopt the rule, it would not make any difference to employment. But there are many that obviously can meet the suggestion to work on a 10 per cent decrease in hours per week and a 10 per cent increase in hourly wages. The President expressly said he favored resiliency in any such rule.

"We all know some industries cannot do this. We know that in some it would be ineffective. But we know that in many there is no excuse for not doing it."

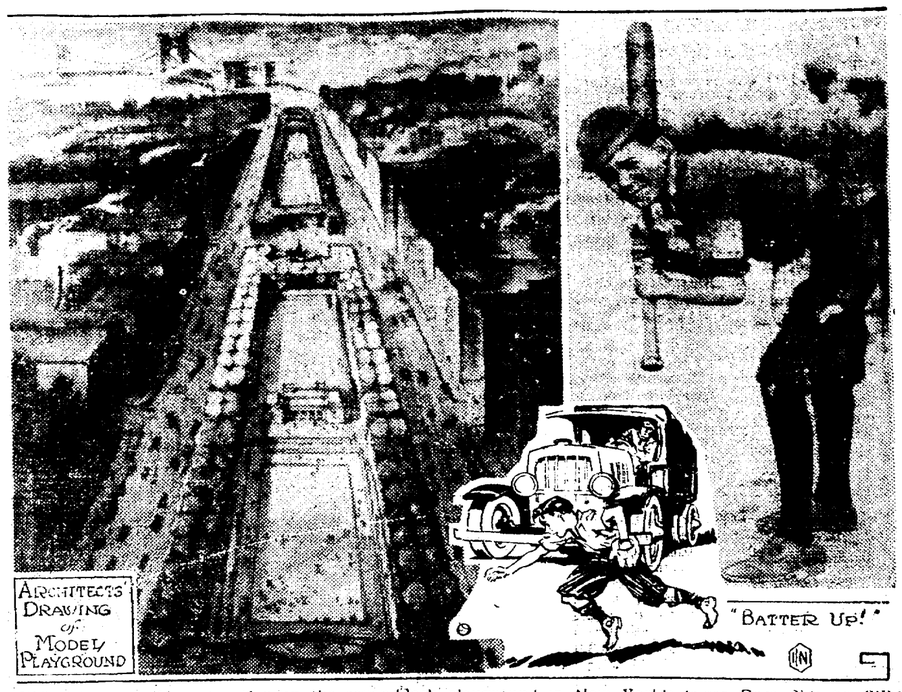
He attacked "company unions" as a "Frankenstein" and took particular pains to praise the various officials of the American Federation of Labor who are serving in various capacities under the NRA Blue Eagle.

"We have got to accord labor the rights guaranteed by this act," he said. "There is no law prohibiting a company union as such if there is no interposition whatever by employers, and if the men freely choose it. But 99 times out of 100, you and I know that this is not the case. Let us not hid ourselves. Let us act before Congress acts. Let us obey the law. Call in Senator Wagner's board. (The National Labor board.) Let your men express their choice under those public auspices from which no question can arise.

"I would rather deal with William Green, John Lewis, Edward McGrady, Michael McDonough, George Berry and a host of others than with any Frankenstein that you may build up under the guise of a company union."

Johnson has asked the members of the capital goods industries code authorities to meet under the chairmanship of George H. Houston, president of the Baldwin Locomotive company, and the code authorities and committees of consumers' goods industries under the chairmanship of George Sloan, president of the textile institute, and consider his "ten and ten" policy.

New Playground Eden for Gotham Children



With the start of construction on the seven-block playground in New York's lower East Side by CWA workers, the death rate among East Side children is due for a big drop. Street baseball and East River bathing has taken an appalling toll of young lives every summer in that congested area. The new playground, the site of which originally was intended for a model housing scheme, will provide facilities for every type of juvenile sport. The plans call for baseball diamonds, wading pools with spray showers, tennis courts and the hundred and one other modes of diversion beloved of the young and healthy. It will also provide a resting place for mothers in the day and floodlighted at night, a recreation spot for adults

THIS one was told me by a movie feller they call a cutter. That is a fellow that if the picture hasn't been taken bad enough in the first place, why he cuts it all up and puts it back together so it makes it look like something. Well, here I meet him in Berlin the other day and he is a real producer and buyer and seller of Movies, and is a real live hustling Kid. If you haven't gone into the movie business yet, why you can't do worse than Walter. He will sell you anything that was ever taken. Well, we sit having a party one night, arguing over the movies, and just as I was going to sleep he broke out with the following. He went back home to where he had lived in Pennsylvania. He asked about a certain Jones family that used to live there and they told him here is what happened to them. "Tom, he is out where you come from in Hollywood. He is in the Movies. He is a Movie Shark and doing fine, they say Jack, that's the next one; he turned stage Actor and you see his picture ever once in awhile. William is an Artist; he is a pretty good Painter, they say. Mary, the Sister, is doing some Literary work, but Sam, he never amounted to anything at all. He stayed here and it just took about all he ever made to support the rest of them."

PICKAWAY PUPILS STUDY FOR TESTS

Pickaway-co school pupils are training for several state tests scheduled within the next month.

The county senior scholarship test, also open to the local high school, will be conducted here March 24 beginning at 8 a. m. An agricultural test will be held the same day. The tests are sponsored by the state department of education with D. L. Buchanan, local supervisor. His committee includes Profs. E. L. Daily, E. I. Gephart, Ray Sponsler, Harold Bowers, and C. A. Higley.

On March 31 the county-wide elimination for the state test will be held. Thirty students will be selected to represent Pickaway-co. Fifteen subjects will be presented. Examinations will be held at Williamsport and Ashville schools. The townships have not yet been assigned their school.

McAlister Trial Set

COLUMBUS, March 8.—After listening to testimony for a day and a half, a grand jury today had returned a second degree murder indictment against Daniel McAlister, suspended city detective, in connection with the fatal shooting of Harry Adams, 22-year-old South high school graduate, last February 11.

Trial of the detective is expected to be set for the week of March 19, according to Donald J. Hoskins, Franklin-co prosecutor.

Only a Spark Needed

HOW ripe for war is the situation along the Manchukuo-Soviet border is seen in the sharp protest sent Moscow by Tokyo against Russian airplane flights over Manchukuo and Korea. Additional evidence of danger is supplied in reports from border points relating that a Japanese military plane has been shot down and that the pilot of Japanese civilian plane plane has been wounded by Russians.

The Tokyo protest may be expected to evoke a set of fresh charges from Soviet sources concerning the violation of Russian territory by Japanese airmen.

There may be much or little truth in these reports. The important thing is that they are being made and that on either side of the border is an army potentially hostile to the other, and some of the leaders of both of which no doubt are eager for a fight.

This situation was not created suddenly. It has been in process of development for several years, marked by frequent predictions of war between the two countries. Each side finally has massed large bodies of troops along the border. These armies are equipped with the most modern weapons of war on land, water and in the air. They are made up of well trained soldiers. In the Japanese army are many veterans of the Japanese campaign in China.

It would be hard to stage a more perfect setting for the outbreak of war. Weather conditions constitute about the only unfavorable element, but these are no guarantee against a clash at this time. All that is needed is a spark. A border incident that at any other time would be insignificant can supply this.

Border incidents are occurring, actually and by report. Cool heads, if there are any—in Tokyo and Moscow many prevent a clash. But there are no strong grounds on which to base such a hope.

This situation, from the standpoint of peace, is extremely dangerous.

Single Homes

ENORMOUS home hotels will one day supplant the traditional one-family house in America, predicts a modernist architect who looks upon the ideal of life in a one-family house as nothing more than the old-fashioned conception of civilization.

The trend has, to be sure, been in that direction in the cities, where something less than the ideal is accepted for its greater convenience or for financial reasons. But even there the suburbs with their one-family houses swallow up the cliff-dwellers once it is theirs to choose. And in the small town, where the double-house, rows of houses and flat are the nearest things to the city apartment, the demand is for single houses set on wider and deeper lots.

This does not mean that tomorrow's trend will not turn to the "home hotel." When the large apartment can offer more privacy through actually sound-proof walls, air-conditioning permitting closed windows and doors the year around and home ownership within the reach of small incomes, then will come true.

But for today each one-family dwelling represents in greater or less degree one of man's most natural instincts that of owning his home. And [illegible] apartment does not satisfy [illegible] instinct.

KNAVE'S GIRL

SYNOPSIS

Fear that Bill McGee, the racketeer, would wreak vengeance on her and her family if she refused to go out with him, caused lovely Patricia Warren to accept his invitations. Bill is shot by a rival gangster while in Pat's company. Pat rushes home in terror and her stepmother puts her out, saying the police are looking for Pat. Unable to find employment, Pat resorts to her card skill and plays professional bridge. Julian Haverholt, noted bridge expert, makes her his partner. While they are discussing business details at his home, Clark Tracy, the polo player and Pat's secret love, calls. She had met him once but he does not recognize her. Haverholt introduces Pat as his niece. She is indignant, but he explains later that he was thinking of her reputation and that it would be advisable for her to assume that role as long as she is to stay at his home. Accustomed to poverty, Pat revels in the luxury of her surroundings. Reading an announcement of Clark's approaching marriage to Marthe March, Pat experiences pangs of jealousy. Following the settling of a bridge argument, Haverholt wants to give Pat a gift to celebrate their coming to an agreement. She selects a roadster like Marthe March's. Noting Pat's disappointment when Clark goes away with his fiancee's family and breaks an appointment to teach her how to drive, Haverholt asks her if she is in love with Clark. She denies it. Days go by with nothing but bridge and Pat is exhausted. The great test comes when Pat and Haverholt enter a tournament sponsored by Reuben Blair, Haverholt's bitter rival.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

They reached the hotel. The club rooms were on the fourteenth floor. Somehow, Patricia had expected unusual excitement in the lobby. There was none. The Hotel Winston, a smart Park Avenue hotel, accepted the fact of a major bridge tournament with surprising equanimity. One or two of the clerks recognized Haverholt and whispered about him and his young companion; that was all.

"There isn't much bally-hoo, is there?" said Patricia, when they were waiting for the elevator.

"Reuben Blair's way of doing things," commented Haverholt disgustedly. "He thinks the press is vulgar. I'd have this hotel simply boiling with reporters, I'd have crowds in the street, I'd have——"

"A brass band in the lobby?" suggested Patricia.

"Not quite that," conceded Haverholt, unsmilingly. "But the day is coming and Blair will have to see it, when contract bridge will belong not to the few but to the public."

"And you will be king of it all?"

"I am king," admitted Haverholt simply.

They stepped into the elevator and swooped upward.

"By the way," said the bridge expert casually, "Clark is back from Aiken. He may be on hand tonight. I thought it best to warn you."

"Why?" she asked calmly enough.

"I was afraid his presence might upset your play."

"Then, you were quite wrong," Patricia told him.

But, her heart had set up the old wild tumult and her hands were as cold as ice.

The fourteenth floor was jammed. Ballyhoo or no ballyhoo, the real bridge lovers of the city and their satellites had managed to collect there. The velvet-carpeted, softly lighted corridors giving on the card-rooms milled with men in evening dress and bright-eyed, eager women. It was a cosmopolitan, typically New York gathering; there were society people pausing between dinner and the theater, a dowager or two, splendid in jewels, reminiscing of the days of bridge whist, several actresses, not really interested in cards, but anxious to be seen at so smart an occasion, a sprinkling of the more reputable politicians, present by invitation, drifting uneasily here and there, a movie magnate, alert for color, a famous writer looking bored and self-conscious, waiting for his wife to complete her conversation. Professional bridge players, of course, in the majority.

Tension and excitement were in the air. People were laughing and talking, placing bets with each other on favorites for the evening, discussing the most extraordinary hand I ever held, my dear. . . .

Immediately upon their appearance Patricia and Haverholt were besieged. Patricia acknowledged introductions to dozens of people. She smiled at the movie magnate, she shook hands with the famous writer, she accepted the good wishes of a sloe-eyed, exotic actress, who had closed in the most successful play of the season just last week. Patricia felt herself carried along by a dizzying, exciting wave of popularity. Silly she knew, but she was thrilled by it. It was fun to be somebody, fun, she confessed to herself a little shamefacedly, to be Patricia Haverholt. Hero-worshippers, friends of Haverholt's, acquaintances, utter strangers, hemmed her in, exclaiming, admiring, questioning. Yes, she said over and over, it was her first tournament; yes, she was excited; thank you, she hoped to do well.

"Has Blair turned up yet?" she heard Haverholt ask someone.

"I hear he isn't coming, that his secretary will make the presentation tonight."

A little significant laugh ran through the group.

"He's ducked out because I'm an entrant," Haverholt summed it up with a laugh. "Reuben is busy trying to save his face."

The floodgates were opened. The clamor grew. The reputation of the absent host was ripped to shreds by his guests, Haverholt assisting enthusiastically. Patricia liked this less. But, just then, she glimpsed Clark Tracy, browner than when she had last seen him, tanned by the southern sun. He waved, smiled and threaded toward them.

Patricia had thought she would be shaken by the encounter. She was not. Her taste of success, the coming tournament, her own assured position, braced her so that she could greet him as she would any other casual acquaintance, naturally, simply, even a little absently. Clark must be introduced all around first, he must speak to his own friends in the group, he must add his own good wishes for the Haverholt team, before he had his moment with her, and then not alone.

"I've been back from Aiken for several days," he began, seeing his chance to get in a word. "I've been meaning to give you a ring."

"Have you?" she asked with youthful indifference.

Flushed and lovely in the golden gown, smiling here and there, nodding, taking for granted the admiring glances that came her way, Patricia was a picture of poised and confident and exquisite girlhood. Looking down into her eyes, Clark felt a slow, unwilling stir of the pulses. He had an odd desire to capture the attention she was bestowing so lavishly upon others, to fix it upon himself. After all he had known her since her first day in the city, far longer than had any of the babbling fools who now surrounded her.

"I was sorry," he resumed awkwardly, "sorry I wasn't able to teach you to drive."

"That was all right. I understood," she told him so kindly that he felt vaguely irritated. She spoke to someone beside her. "Yes, Mr. Billings, it's true that I've played bridge since the cradle. But, my present game, of course, is based on Julian's."

Her eyes returned lazily to Clark.

He said a little stiffly, "I had been hoping that it wasn't yet too late. Or, are you driving now?"

"I'm a battle-scarred veteran," she declared gayly and with a total disregard for the truth. "I expect to tackle traffic on Monday."

"Patricia," interrupted Julian sharply, "we must go into the card rooms. They've opened the doors."

Clark held her one last moment.

"Have I offended you?"

"How in the world could you?" demanded Patricia, wide-eyed. "What made you ask?"

His own voice had been low. Hers, in a lull in the general conversation, was uncomfortably distinct. The man flushed. He could not say before other listeners that she seemed less friendly. Perhaps, she did not, perhaps he only imagined a subtle change in her attitude, a change that distressed him disproportionately. He said, "I fancied for a minute that I had."

"Well, you haven't."

"Patricia, do come along, we must take our places."

"Will you and Miss Haverholt be at Belmont next week for the races?" Clark put in, hurriedly, almost desperately trying to hold them.

"I may cut my throat in the morning," drawled Julian. "On the other hand, I may be at the race track next week. I couldn't say at the moment, Clark."

And so they left him, Haverholt, grinning at Clark's discomfiture. That young man should know better than to seek a future appointment at the beginning of an important tournament.

Patricia absently agreed. Her whole mind was on the coming ordeal. The card rooms, two of them thrown together for the occasion, were severely furnished with two parallel rows of bridge tables, seven in each row, each table numbered and shining in its separate pool of light. Water pitchers and glasses, ash trays fastened to the tables, dozens of aluminum boards containing the cards, pencils, score pads; straight backed armless chairs for the players. A singularly undramatic setting, thought Patricia.

The scene itself was dramatic enough. Fifty-six professional bridge players, dissatisfied with the seating, dissatisfied with the arrangements, nervous as runners awaiting the gun, hostilely eyeing prospective opponents, giving a last word of advice to partners, quarreling with the attendants who ran to and fro trying to get everyone settled. Fifty-six professional bridge players, gathered to compete for a silver cup and the honor of winning it. The good wishes were over. The lightness was gone. Everyone kept his good wishes for himself.

No visitors were allowed. No one was allowed to watch the play. A few representatives of bridge magazines, Haverholt's and Blair's magazines among them, skulked in the background, properly authorized to copy the play and bidding of the more interesting hands at the end of the evening.

"Frightened, Patricia?" asked Haverholt.

"Not a bit," she denied, white to the lips.

"Here we are, I think. We start as North and South, table 3.

Patricia, weak-kneed, sat down, watched others seating themselves around her.

Insufficient Rest Cause Of Ills

Resistance Lowered and Body Becomes a Prey to Disease

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

PERHAPS YOU know somebody who manages to get along on a few hours of sleep and brags of his ability to do so. He is making a grave mistake. Very likely he will not listen to reason, however, until his health has been impaired.

Dr. Copeland

Insufficient sleep and rest are the chief and common causes of a run-down condition. When it reaches this state, the body is extremely susceptible to infections, contagious diseases and other serious ailments. Many suffer from chronic maladies which could have been prevented. These would have been avoided if proper measures of prevention had been taken.

Get "Early to Bed" Habit

It is indeed tragic that when it is too late there comes the desire to rest. By that time the damage has been done. The old saying, "Lock the barn door after the horse has been stolen," can well be applied to this class of citizens.

The human body is often compared to a machine. With one exception this is a good comparison. When the old parts of a machine wear out, new parts can be obtained and substituted. Unfortunately, this is not the case with the human mechanism. But wear and tear of the human body can be guarded against by taking adequate rest and by keeping in mind the body's limitations.

I cannot overemphasize the importance of the "early to bed" habit. Accustom the child to a regular bed time. By beginning in early infancy you will foster a healthful habit. This practice will greatly benefit as he grows older. Bear in mind, too, that sufficient sleep is essential to proper mental and physical development.

A Cause of Many Ills

Many children suffer from lack of sleep and rest. In consequence they have weak muscles, frail bodies, poor posture, poor complexion and deep "circles" under their eyes. They are irritable, easily vexed and have no appetite. Usually these complaints can be corrected by getting the needed sleep and rest.

In a similar way, the adult who suffers from lack of sleep and rest becomes cross and impatient with everything and everybody. He complains of many unpleasant symptoms, such as faulty digestion, liver and intestinal upsets, constipation, lack of appetite and loss of weight. As a rule, he soon becomes the victim of some chronic disorder.

Nothing is more distressing than to be unable to sleep. I am confident that many who suffer that way can trace their present difficulties to a lack of sleep in youth. Going to bed at irregular hours and neglect of the body mechanism, soon takes its effects and leads to insomnia.

Answers to Health Queries

H. B. O. Q.—I am a young man of 19 and my whole body is covered with pimples which itch, being much worse at night. They resemble a bite and are inflamed. What would you advise?

A.—It would be difficult to prescribe treatment without making an examination. Make sure that your diet is not at fault. Keep the system clear. The personal hygiene is also important. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

FATE STEPS IN

When we are prone to have our way
And take the road which seems so fair,
As laws of life we disobey
And for the future do not care;
When we advance without a thought
Of where our steps may lead us to,
We make a destiny that's fraught
With ills which we are going to rue.

When nothing seems to daunt our will
Tho we may know that we are wrong
And nothing seems to check or still
The Siren voice with captive song;
Then Fate steps in and with a dare
Takes hold of us; For help we call,
But Fate then grabs us by the hair
And bumps our head against a wall.

Fancy Dress for Cops

CHEYENNE, Wyo.—Cheyenne's police force, under Chief T. Joe Cahill, will present a natty appearance in the future. Chief Cahill, nationally known as publicity director for western dude ranches and Madison Square Garden rodeos, has ordered "very fancy" uniforms, including Sam Browne belts, for the force.

We would take that expert's advice about giving children names suiting their outstanding characteristics only we believe that as they grow older they will become less like Scarface and Benito.

PATTERN 9695

A small girl will look very sweet in this little dress. The yoke is scalloped in front and plain in back. There are little bows which tie the sleeves very smartly, and a cunning collar. Her mother can make the dress omitting the lower part of the sleeves and the collar, as the small sketch shows. Use the pattern to make several different dresses: for example, it's cute made of a cotton print, and equally dainty in one of the pastel shades in plain silk or linen, or dimity.

Pattern 9695 may be ordered only in sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 4 requires 2⅛ yards 36-inch fabric and ⅜ yard contrasting.

contracts under circumstances which were clearly contrary to good faith and public policy."

3. That no operating company, even remotely connected with a company or with companies manufacturing airplanes or equipment, be given an airmail contract.

4. That a maximum rate of compensation be fixed.

5. That any understandings, combinations or agreements "intended to prevent free competitive bidding" should be a basis for immediate cancellation of any involved contracts.

6. That, to insure competition, only speed, useful load capacity and safety be considered as bases for determining specifications for contracts.

7. That the interstate commerce commission be empowered to pass upon the question of public convenience and necessity of airmail routes six months before expiration of contracts, and thereafter to fix a minimum rate of airmail pay on the routes designated.

8. That, after award of a contract, the contracting company shall be granted six months to qualify under terms of the law and the bid.

9. That no airmail contract may be sold or sublet, and that no company holding a contract be allowed to merge or consolidate with another company holding an airmail contract.

10. That maximum flying hours for pilots and minimum pay be fixed.

Such an all-inclusive program, the president stated, should go far toward insuring competition and honest operation of airmails with a fair profit for the companies involved.

So anxious is the president for enactment of the proposed legislation that he and other administration leaders plan to cut the work of congress during the rest of this session to an actual emergency basis.

Banghart on Trial In Factor Kidnaping

CHICAGO, March 8.—A jury selected in the record time of five hours today was ready to hear opening arguments in the trial of Basil-Banghart, Touhy gangster, for the $70,000 ransom kidnaping of John Factor, wealthy speculator.

The Jurors were qualified to inflict the death penalty.

Roger Touhy, Gus Schaefer and Albert Kator, three other members of the Touhy gang, were convicted and sentenced to 99 years in the penitentiary two weeks ago for the same kidnaping.

Factor, the star witness at two previous trials, again will take the stand to testify, against Banghart.

A Breath From Happy Hollywood

By IRVIN S. COBB

THIS collection already has been enriched by the truthful account of the distinguished New York theatrical magnate who told a well-known playwright that he didn't dare to consider putting on the latter's newest piece called "The Dauphin" because he was sure the American people would never care for a play about a fish.

Then of course there is the tale told of that other and equally prominent manager who, on hearing a synopsis of a dramatization of "David Copperfield," said he liked the story and asked who the original author of the story might have been; and then, when the adaptor told him this honor had belonged to Charles Dickens said promptly:

"Well, you better get in touch with him and we'll fix up a contract and go ahead with the production."

A few days later he personally was supervising the taking of certain scenes of a comedy. In the script prepared from the author's scenario by the continuity writer he came upon a line to the effect that the leading woman should be pictured as seated alone in a deep reverie.

"Come with me, you," he said, indicating the assistant director, the leading lady and the camera-man. "I know just the place for taking this here piece of business."

He loaded the three of them into an automobile, got in himself and bade the driver take them along a certain road winding into the foothills above Los Angeles. After an hour or so of steady travel they came to where a narrow but precipitous canyon cut into the contours of the landscape. Here the leader of the expedition gave orders to halt.

"There you are," he stated, with a wave of his arm, "you could look for a week and nowhere you wouldn't find no deeper reverie for her to be setting in than what this one is."

A TELEPHONE IS THE GREATEST PROTECTION ANYONE CAN HAVE AGAINST FIRE!

64 ALARMS IN 1933

In the year 1933 64 calls were made for the Circleville Fire Department, according to official figures of Fire Chief Talmer Wise. These alarms were turned in from all parts of the city, at day and at night.

Following are the mediums through which the fire department was notified:

BY TELEPHONE	34 CALLS
BY MESSENGER	5 CALLS
BY ALARM BOXES	25 CALLS

As evidenced by the above figures the telephone was the most popular method used in notifying the fire department. It is always the easiest and most accessible—IF YOU HAVE ONE IN YOUR HOME! A messenger requires too much time! You have to hunt for an alarm box, in most cases! But a telephone is always at your elbow.

Here's What the City of Circleville Is Doing for YOU!

Circleville has an investment of between $30,000 and $35,000 in its fire fighting equipment and apparatus. It employs four competent and experienced men at all times to operate the department. You, as a taxpayer and citizen, have access to these facilities whenever the occasion may arise. This department of the city functions for your benefit alone—it is for YOUR protection.

Are You Doing Everything You Possibly Can For Yourself?

Are you getting full benefit of this organization that is at your beck and call at all times? Are you protecting yourself? You're not, unless you have a telephone in your home! By having telephone service at your command you are able to combat any and all emergencies if and when they arise. It is needless to say here that when you want the fire department you want it badly—and the quickest way to get it is by telephone.

Think this over seriously: for only a few cents a day you can have a telephone in YOUR home. If you consider this matter, we know you'll stop in at our business office tomorrow, or some day real soon and order a telephone installed at once.

FAVORITES CONTINUE IN COURT CONTESTS

By International News Service

Basketball was placed in the center of the stage in Ohio today as high school regional tournaments swung into action, aiming toward the grand climax - the championship classic scheduled in Columbus March 15.

Favorites were fairly sailing right along with the dope today and it appeared that unless some "dark horse" entry bursts in and upsets everything the state finals will be fought out by the predicted "chosen few."

While the scarlet fever bogey gummed things up in the regional schedule at Findlay, the Class A southeastern district tournament got under way last night with Marietta, runner-up in the state finals last year, continuing its mad pace by downing Ironton, 21 to 14.

SEVENTEEN IN ROW

The victory was Marietta's 17th consecutive win in succession and placed them as the odds-on favorite to cop the state title this year.

Other teams regarded as dangerous threats, likewise came through with convincing victories. Pomeroy defeated Washington C. H., 31 to 6; Portsmouth upset Greenfield, 22 to 18; Chillicothe turned back New Lexington's valiant charge, 20 to 13; Hillsboro won from Logan, 26 to 15, and Nelsonville took a heart-breaker from Gallipolis, 15 to 14.

A preliminary round was held at Akron last night and there, too, the favorites smashed through with flying colors. The results follow: Akron West, 29, Massillon, 24; Akron Garfield, 30, Euclid Shore, 26; St. Vincents, 24, Louisville, 21 (two overtimes); Wadsworth, 15, Kent Roosevelt, 14.

OTHERS ON TODAY

District tournaments at Findlay, Dayton, Denison and Kent were to get under way today, while the central district meets will start tomorrow at Columbus and Westerville.

The Findlay tournament was pitched into a jumble as the result of the withdrawal of the Bowling Green and Napoleon squads, which are down with the scarlet fever bugaboo.

The eastern district crown is expected to go to Dover High, last year's state champion. Although the Dover team is believed to be a little under the ability of last year's squad, it is expected to have the edge on its toughest opponents —New Philadelphia, East Liverpool and Cambridge.

The winner in the central district appears to be a toss-up between Columbus East, Newark, and Lancaster.

RATTAN IS VICTOR

COLUMBUS, March 8.—A smashing back-slam today had brought victory to "Silent" Rattan, flashy Texas deaf mute wrestler after 36 minutes of torrid battling with Don Cortez, the clever little Spanish welterweight at the Auditorium here last night.

In the other main go on the evening's program, Nanjo Singh, the Hindu wrestler, although handicapped by a severely wrenched and swollen left leg, dropped Tony Gusto, Rochester, N. Y., Italian, with a series of tremendous elbow blows to the jaw. The fall came after eight minutes and 43 seconds of bitter mauling on the part of both contestants.

KOENECKE SLUGS

ORLANDO, Fla., March 8.—Len Koenecke, for whom the late John McGraw paid $75,000 when he was pastiming in the American association, was the talk of the Brooklyn Dodgers' camp today. Koenecke punched the ball to all corners of the lot as Manager Casey Stengel sent his charges through a stiff workout yesterday.

Bob Quinn, General manager of the club, declared he was unworried by the fact that four regulars have not yet returned signed contracts.

HELPLESS CRIPPLE KILLED IN FLAMES

MARIETTA, March 8.—Miss Caroline Tice, 43, a helpless cripple since birth, was burned to death when fire destroyed her home in the hills of Independence twp. 25 miles east of Marietta, yesterday afternoon, it was learned today.

Absence of telephones made it necessary for neighbors to drive to Marietta to summon the county coroner.

Miss Tice was alone in the house when the fire broke out. Her aged mother, Mrs. Mary Tice, a widow, was working outside in the yard.

Will War Come?

this aim had secretly promised Rumania territorial integrity. Coming to the ears of the Hungarians, this so angered them that although they maintain correct relations with Italy, the old friendship has cooled, and Hungary has secretly turned her thoughts to Germany as the knight who will break her chains.

FAILED IN LURE

Italy wanted to lure Rumania out of the little entente. She failed in that and at the same time, by the attempt, lost Hungary. That left Italy with only Bulgaria and Albania.

The Albanian-Italian alliance is vital for Italy. Albania controls the mouth of the Adriatic. In Jugoslav hands Albania could blockade the Adriatic and stopper up every Italian port on her east coast from Trieste to Bari. It was therefore natural that when King Zog came to power in Tirana in 1924, Italy should lend him money. She lent him as a starter $10,000,000 gold in 1925.

In return, Italy got military control of Albania. When the time came to renew the pact, Italy promised another $4,000,000 but times grew hard, money scarce and until today she is believed to have paid no more than $1,750,000. In Albania gifts keep friendship warm and when gifts fail, friendship cools. King Zog was annoyed. He sent his best diplomat, Mehemet Konitze to Belgrade to negotiate a "trade treaty." The net result has been a decided loosening of the Italian hold on Albania.

All that Italy has retained undamaged is the friendship with Bulgaria. King Boris married the daughter of the King of Italy. Bulgaria also could be very useful to Italy in case of a Jugoslav-Italian war.

It is obvious that for the time being France has the upper hand in the Balkans. How long will that last when Germany comes back into the game? Ever since the war, until Hitler came to power, Germany has played no role down here. Before the war the central powers of course dominated the Balkans, although Rumania, waiting to spot the bandwagon, finally leaped on the French car, missed her hold, and was crushed by the German steamroller.

RESPECTS GERMANY

Will Rumania do that again? She has an immense respect for the German military machine. When and if Germany and Austria are united, and Hungary joins the German block, the Germans will be to all intents and purposes neighbors of Rumania. King Carol is a Hohenzollern. The Iron-Guard are pro-German.

The chief thing that stands between Rumania and Germany under these circumstances is the fact that Rumania possesses in Transylvania 62,222 square kilometers of territory she took from Hungary. But a prominent Rumanian politician told me he considered it perfectly possible that Rumania and Hungary might one day come to an agreement over Transylvania.

The forces that play in international politics are much like the forces that move the heavenly bodies. The larger the planet the more attractive force it has. As Germany grows from month to month in strength, and especially if she gets Austria and more especially after she is completely rearmed, her attractive force toward the smaller powers grows perceptibly. France today still has her guns and her gold. But the discount value of her treaty system has already fallen below par.

Germanys mere intention of acquiring a big army has already changed the constellation of European politics considerably. When she actually has it they will change still more, and who knows but that Regent Horthy may be right when he opined Germany would get what she wanted without fighting for it.

Tomorrow—The part Bulgaria plays in "Will War Come."

MOVIES

AT THE GRAND

J. Carrol Naish, who assays more menace per pound than almost any other screen bad man, has the part of "Chopper" Allen, enemy of Spencer Tracy, Claire Trevor and Ralph Morgan in "The Mad Game" Fox feature now showing at the Grand Theater. Others in the cast are Howard Lally, John Miljan Matt McHugh, Kathleen Burke, Mary Mason, Willard Robertson, John Davidson, Paul Fix and Jerry Devine. Irvin Cummings directed.

AT THE CLIFTONA

The World's Fair Premier revue presents its opening performances at 11:30 p. m. this evening in a burst of gala entertainment.

Twelve seaplanes manned by crack pilots, instructors at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, and nine submarine chasers fully equipped with the modern implements of warfare and manned by four hundred officers and cadets from the same institution, are seen in thrilling action in sham war manoeuvres in the gripping climax of "Midshipman Jack," RKO-Radio Pictures' romance with Bruce Cabot and Betty Furness coming to the Cliftona Theatre Friday and Saturday.

The warcraft depicts how aviators and submarine chasers attack invading enemy underwater craft. In the tense climax, a plane and submarine are shown in a head on collision, said to be one of the most thrilling stunts ever staged for a motion picture production.

"Midshipman Jack" features Bruce Cabot as a recalcitrant cadet who becomes entangled in adventurous and romantic intrigue when he breaks his probation. The picture was directed and also features Frank Albertson, Purnell Pratt and Florence Lake in the cast. Cabanne directed from a story of his own story.

Coming to The Cliftona Theatre
